Flash on Eagles!

Together

Campus. Buildings. Classrooms. Teachers. Students. Every year each of these strives to be different from those of the past, and tries to set the standards for the ones in the future. In actuality, the only ones that are different, are the people on campus, in the buildings, in the classrooms. Their individual personalities are present, flashes of color in a broad spectrum. Funny as it may seem, it's the striving for individuality that brings a student body together.

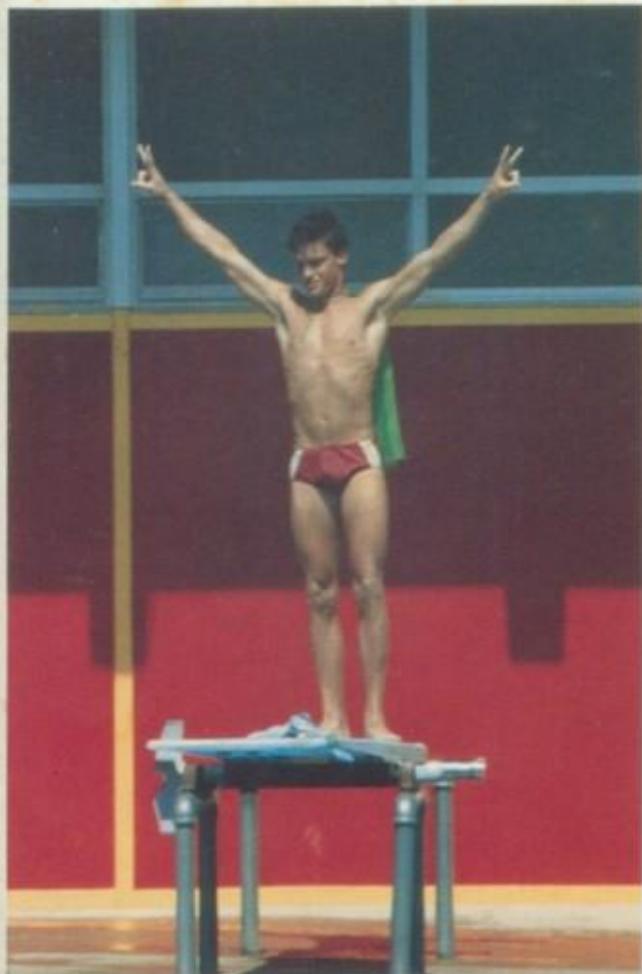

The band plays for our first pep assembly of the year

In between classes, Karen Schlessinger grabs her next period's books

Right before his final dive, during the belly-flop contest, Parker Steel emotionally prepares himself and the crowd.

Best Smile candidates Claudia Rosendahl, Padraig McCoy, and Jim Sage.

Mr. Moody's history assignments are as entertaining as you make them according to Kellie Wylie and Christie Schwarz.

Our improving football team lines up to try to prevent the offense from going further.

Friends are really supportive of each other, as Russell Rowland finds out. His friends Deanna Gloster, Pattie Towler, and Michelle Stolar give him a lift.

Rich Devore, an Estanica alumni, gives good advice to his water polo friends.

Everyone has their 'place' during lunch. Michelle Anderson, Devi Hoyt, Kai Hoyt, and Michelle Hart.

Red Hot

The class of 88 flashes red. And every page flashes memories into the minds of students. Red is hot, it's bright, it's cool, it's noble, it's happenin', and it stands out from all other colors. The goal is to stand out in everything: in academics, in spirit, in clubs, in sports, and in life. Friends, family, boyfriends, girlfriends, laughing, talking, sharing, smiling, and crying are all part of life. Stand out in life. Life - the most important.

A picture is cause for quite a commotion.

Flash On Student Life

Time outside of class is a small portion of a student's life. That time has to be made the most of to fully benefit the student. This time is provided for students to relax and make themselves ready for another day at school. Different students relax in different ways.

Lockers. What is a locker, exactly, food?" A home has pictures in it, anyway? Well, a locker is a place doesn't it? Well, so do lockers. Pictures make an area more warm and friendly. "When things get hectic in yearbook," Jennifer Duffy said, "I sit and look at my Wall. Everything seems to calm down".

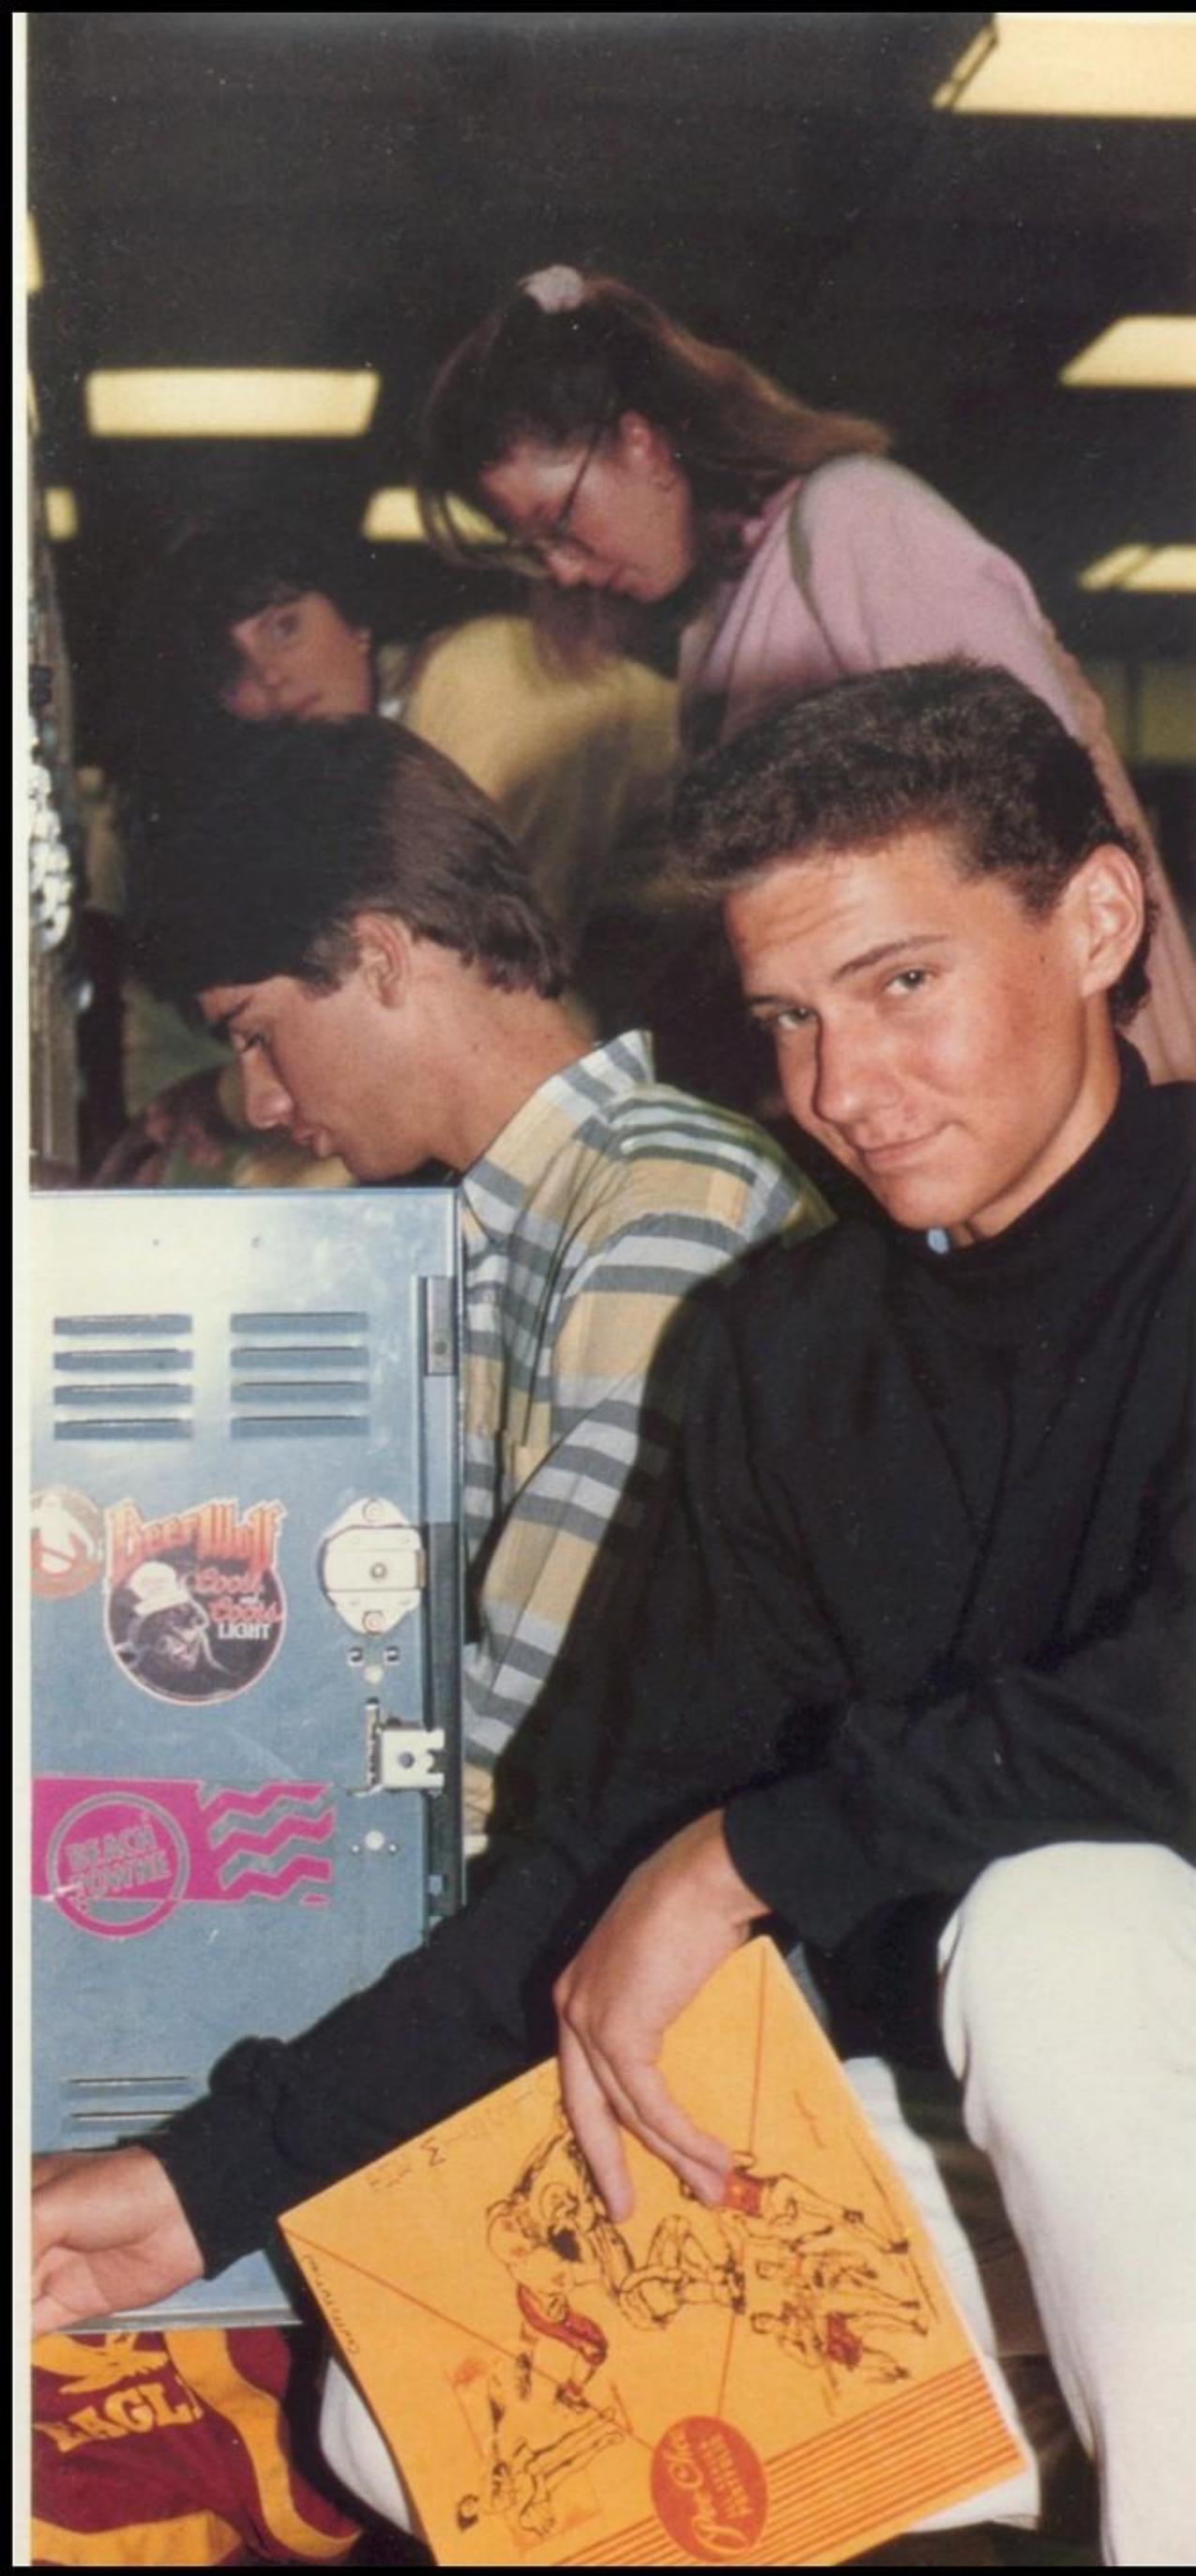

where students keep their books and pencils. Or, at least, that's how it used to be. Lockers are something much more, now. "My locker is my home!" Elizabeth Hoffmann said, "I keep everything in it from clothes to

Senior Summer: A Time Never To Be Forgotten

A new "closeness" was established among the seniors over summer vacation. The awareness that in one year's time, and the coming of college, the best of friends could become no more than pen pals, was becoming more and more evident. Summer was a time for fun in the sun with old friends, but also a time for acquiring new friendships that were promises of great times to come during the year. The realization that this was the last year together as the class of '88, brought strangers together and made them friends.

Though many seniors worked over the summer, the class of '88 found time to get together for one last beach party down at "G" street, in Balboa. It was both a way to remember the good times of summer, and also welcome in the new school year together . . . as the seniors of 1988.

The Look That's In

Estrancia hit the fashion scene with a multitude of trends. A variety of colors were found from head to toe. The brightest and boldest were found on everything from uniquely braided wrist bands, to Team Rasta T-shirts. The color variety continued with trends such as visors and High Tops. Relief from the hot sun was never far away with the convenience of a strapless visor. Whatever the style of clothing you wore this year, you were sure to make the impression you wanted, as long as you followed the trend that suited your personality. Expressing your true feelings and moods in the way you dress was very popular this year . . . and always will be.

Do You Wanna Dance?

Homecoming this year was definitely an experience. The dance was held on the 31st, night of ghouls and goblins. Because of the choice date, the dance committee, the sophomores, decided to make it a masquerade. "Being Halloween, we all missed trick-or-treating so the masks made up for it," said Mark Sam Joyner Hartley.

The King and Queen this year were Sean Daley and Kristen Wil- liams. Their court consisted of seniors Tony Mendoza, Karen Schlesinger, Kellie Kane, Melony Wojtkiewicz, Danny Dougherty, and Frank Herman; juniors Mark Hartley and Tricia Lee; sophomores Danny Ucker and Amy Burke; and freshmen Paul McDaniels and "I felt all the people gave a lot of support," said Yami Franco, a sophomore at Estancia. The Homecoming game was played so extraordinarily well that the crowd was amazed at the team.

They really did a great job in holding back Corona Del Mar H.S. In fact, the score at half-time was still 0-0. It was not until the third quarter that

Corona scored a field goal on us. "We tried hard, but unfortunately we lost 0-3,"

New And Old Faces

Who was your favorite entertainer of 1987? It was a tough choice considering all of the talented actors and singers that topped the charts. Many refreshing new faces and fond old ones appeared. "Different World", starring Lisa Bonet, was an instant hit. The parody "Married ... With Children" and the exciting "21 Jumpstreet" also proved to be popular. Oldies but goodies, "Cheers", "Moonlighting", and "The David Letterman Show" still had a warm place in people's hearts.

A string of baby movies took off in the theatres. "Baby Boom", starring

Diane Keaton, "Raising Arizona", and "Three Men and a Baby", with Tom

Selleck, Ted Danson, and Steve Guttenberg were part of the trend.

In the music world, INXS and Squeeze regained popularity.

"I thought one of the best movies was "Cry Freedom"."

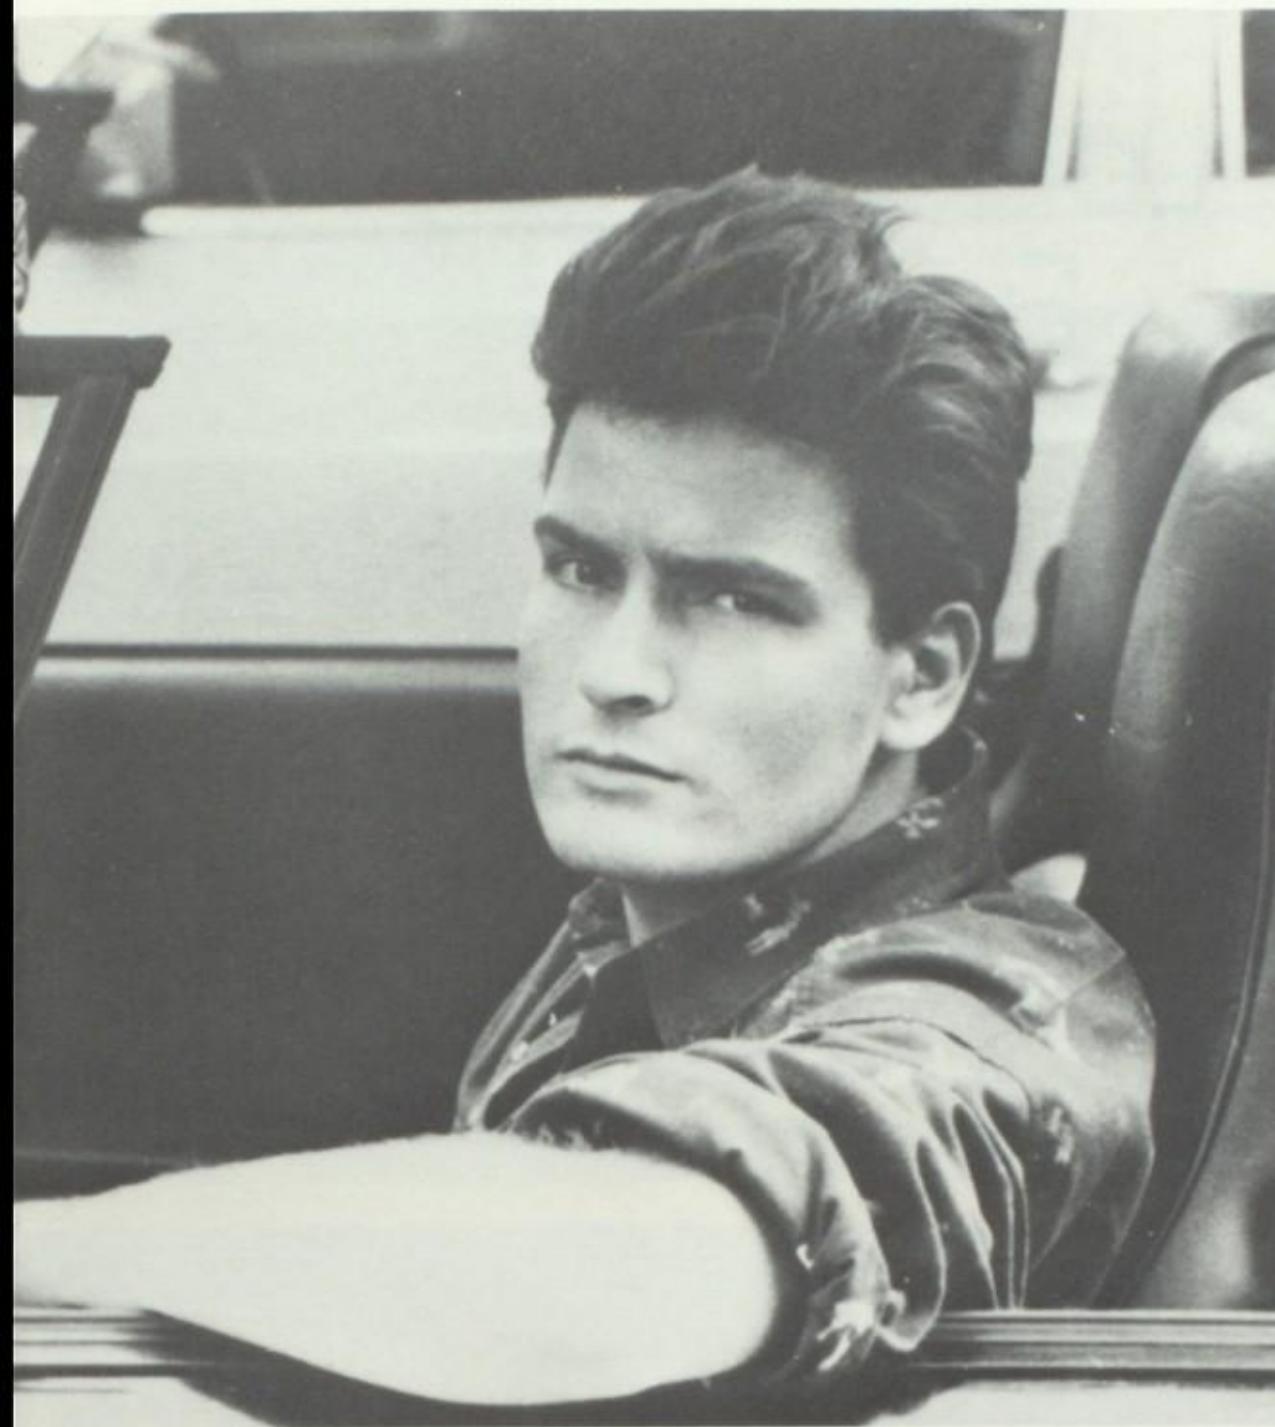

Russel Wilson

Janet Jackson was nominated for nine American Music Awards along with the Crystal Award for "Nasty".

Bono, the lead singer of the Irish rock group, U2, opens a concert at Madison Square Garden.

Superstar Whitney Houston performs at New York's Madison Square Garden in September.

Tom Cruise gets a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame on Hollywood Blvd.

Leaders Of The Future

"ASB did an excellent job in the past year!" said Brett Moody.

ASB had many fundraisers for each of the four different classes. The freshmen had a few car washes and a carbash. The sophomores, juniors and seniors also had car washes of their own.

The money they earned went to several activities, such as winter formal, homecoming, and prom. The Red Cross blood drive and the SOS (Save Our-Selves) canned food drive were also initiated by the ASB. In total 61 pints of blood was collected, and over 500 cans were contributed to SOS.

Another popular event organized by ASB was the Senior/Faculty basketball game held on April 7. Students had to either purchase a ticket or bring in earthquake supplies, needed by the Earthquake Preparedness Committee.

The game ended in a victory by the faculty, 42 to 29.

Laura Varzak, ASB president, concluded, "The commission did quite a good job this year."

Weekends: A Time To Relax

Weekend: a time to relax and forget about the troubles and worries that are related to school. Even for those who have jobs on Saturday and Sunday, weekends were still a refreshing change of pace.

How did Estancia students spend their time off? Some options were trips to the beach, parties, occasional dances, dates, and of course, the movies.

Surfing, smashball, and scamming were just some of the activities students were found doing at the beach.

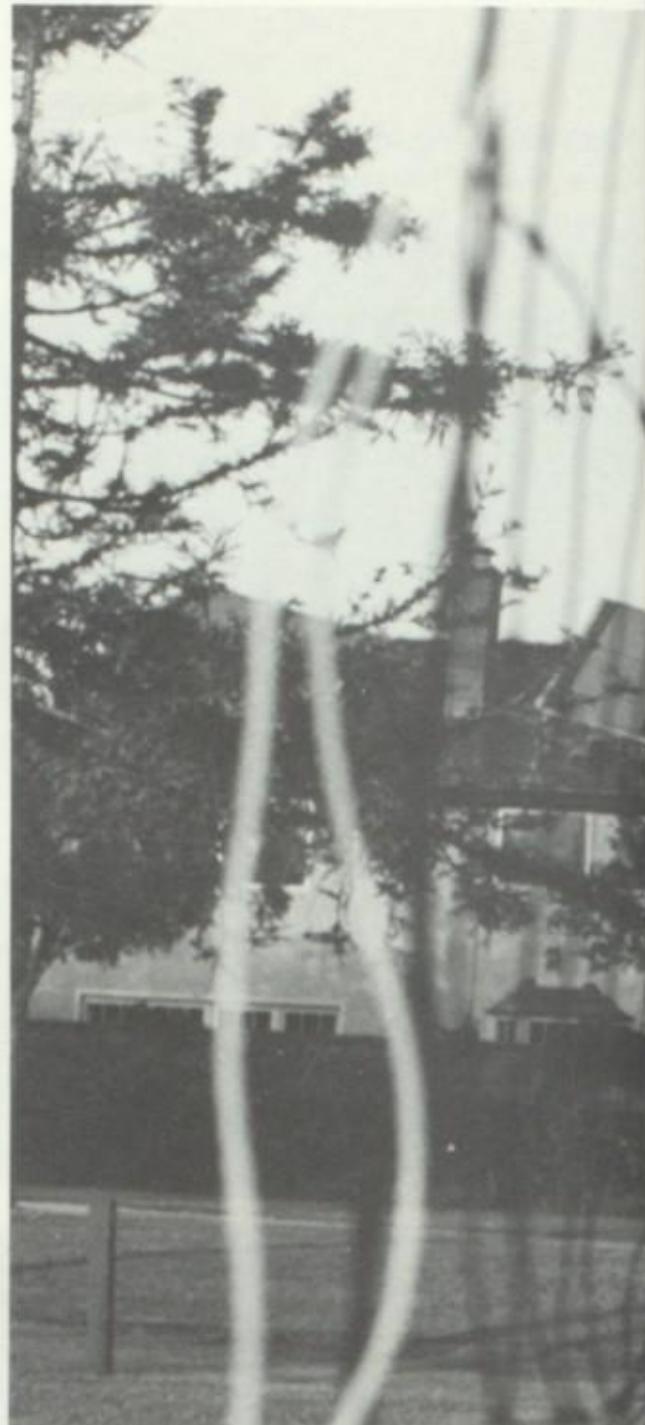

Dances and dates were popular forms of entertainment because they provided a meeting place for friends outside of school.

Relaxing with a tub of popcorn and a coke at the movies was a great way to spend weekends.

Relaxing in the sunshine, Ann Walker enjoys her weekend to the fullest.

Eagles Spirit Takes Off

The minute a sophomore girl decided to try out for any part of the Pep squad, the fun, along with the hard work, began. Cheering at clinics after school and making up new routines paid off for many when it came time for try-outs.

In the middle of the night, after try-outs, the nominees that were selected to become part of the Eagles' Pep squad, were abducted from their warm beds and faced with the scheming look in the eyes of the graduating cheerleaders.

The next morning, the unsuspecting new additions to Pep squad were taken to school, where they were subject to the plotting minds of the others. They were publicly egged, smeared in honey, had syrup poured down their pants, and shaving cream seemed to cover a majority of their heads.

After long showers, the recently initiated members were ready to start in their new positions as members of Estancia's

1987-88 Pep squad.

Throughout the year, with the help of Pep advisor Mrs. Nancy Ferda, the squad performed in assemblies, dressed in uniform on game days, and worked on new routines to boost the spirit of the student body and show their Eagles' pride.

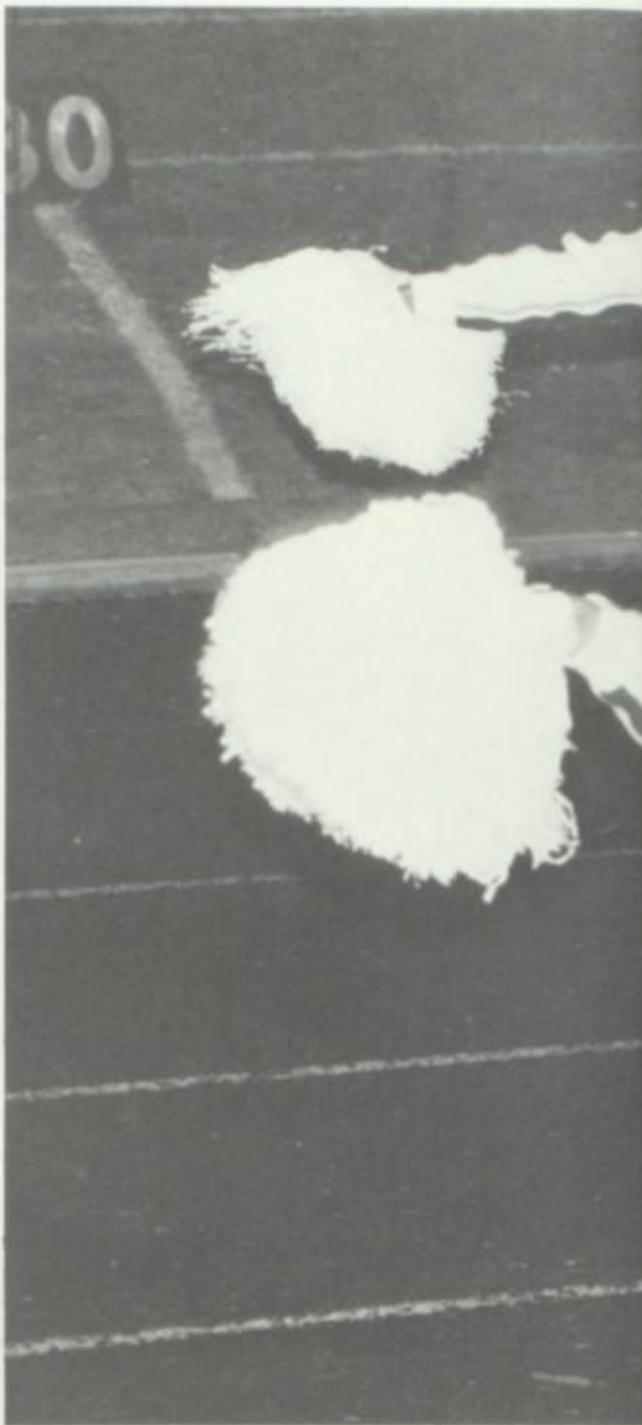

"I'm glad I did cheerleading. A lot of good friendships came out of it."

Senior Class Invites You

"Winter Formal? We had a blast! It was so much fun," said Kym Krankewicz. Knott's Berry Farm was the festive place on February 4, 1988. The idea of a formal dance being held at an amusement park seemed to be widely favored.

"There were a variety of things to do. If you got tired of dancing, you could go outside, where it was quiet, to cool off. There were also rides to go on," Mike Schnurstein said. The rides that were open were the Corkscrew, the Mine Ride, the Wacky Soap Box Racers, and the Sky Cabin. The King and Queen of this "night in h e v e n " were Parker Steele and Diane Roberts. For a half an hour, near the end o f t h e

Basically The Same, Yet Very Different

"Typographical errors are probably the only thing that yearbook and newspaper have in common. The newspaper may publish opinions on the editorial page, confront 'hot issues' head on, and put the spot light on a few select people. The yearbook, on the other hand, must approach subjects objectively at all times, must cover the whole student body, and should also maintain a good school outlook,"

Jennifer Duffy, yearbook editor-in-chief, said.

"I like the newspaper because the issues are always changing. You don't have to cover the same stuff every year," Jennifer Garrett, newspaper editor-in-chief, said.

Both the newspaper and yearbook required their staffs to put in extra hours on many occasions. The night before a hectic deadline, it would not be uncommon for the yearbook staff to still be working at 10:00 p.m. Ordering pizza, to keep their energy up, usually helped to relieve the pressure of the deadline.

The newspaper staff got to school early, 6:30 a.m. if there was a lot to be done. They got a new program for a Macintosh computer that made designing pages easier, but first everything had to be typed into it.

"I always knew the deadline was coming up, but it still always took me by surprise."

Flash On Academics

Probably the hardest time of one's life is spent in the classroom. In a classroom, a student is pressured to learn and get a good grade. This grade is needed to go on to college. The competition is fierce, but that's what academics is all about: striving to be the best.

Mr. Brant entertains his junior class with stories from the past

Keeping the students informed from dawn to dusk Keep it up, Counselors!

"The counseling office is just a structure to keep students informed," said John Prichard, head of the counseling staff of Carolyn Crockett, Christine Cullen, and J. Ted Moore.

Students saw their counselors at least three times every year for "programming", scheduling their classes.

Dr. Robert Francy, principal, holds a friendly chat with Mr. Robert Hassay, CROP and career planning teacher.

However, students could also send in green call slips to see their counselor about problems ranging from broken lockers to a hate-hate relationship with one of their teachers.

"Mr. Prichard's really considerate. He tries to help you, and if he can't, then he's really sympathetic," said Debbie Hargrove.

Mrs. Christine Cullen shares a laugh with one of her students during a respite from her work.

Even though it is a very busy day, Jill Wood, Jean O'Toole, and Belinda Lindsay still find time to share their thoughts.

Each of the counselors get about 700 call slips each year in addition to the regularly scheduled meetings with students.

"School is an impersonal system; we're the people who stand between the system and the people to keep the people from getting hurt," said Mr. Prichard.

John Prichard grins out of his office-a second home for many students.

A Retirement?

"Out the gate in '88," said Mr. Al Matz. He decided to retire with his favorite graduating class: the class of '88.

Don't doubt '88 is his favorite. Mr. Matz even had a bumper sticker in his office with the slogan: I love the class of '88.

That wasn't his only reason for retiring, though. In fact, he had quite a few. "After all," Mr. Matz said, "how much time do I have left?"

Well, whatever time he does have left he plans to make into his "golden years."

Mr. Matz turned 60 in February and figured he would retire so he could enjoy his golden years while he still has his health and with golden memories to look back on as well.

After fording through 36 years of administrative work and teaching in four totally different types of communities including 16 years at E.H.S. he "finished up in heaven at E.H.S."

'It's Cool'

"It's time to do my homework, read a book, or just kick back," said Bonnie Blackburn, junior, a counseling office helper.

Counseling office helpers and teacher aides basically had similar jobs and similar free time.

Counseling office helpers delivered call slips, filed things such as schedule changes, answered phones, and did other office work.

Teacher aides helped correct tests, ran off copies, and sometimes ran errands.

Blackburn added, "It helps me become familiar with office procedures."

Blackburn enjoyed being a counseling helper not only because of the free time to do homework but also because she enjoyed delivering call slips and seeing all her friends while delivering.

Being a counseling helper is good for a future business career-especially in running a school. Being a teacher assistant is a good experience for someone who wishes to be a teacher of high school subjects.

Difficult and Exciting: A Challenge

A six to ten page essay by the end of first semester? Are you kidding, Mr. Harvey?

Seniors are old pros at cranking out papers like this, but for sophomores, this came as a big surprise.

Yes, that's right. Sophomores. 25 of them. All in a new, experimental, better-than-ever Honors English class.

According to Mr. Dave Harvey, the new English teacher from Corona Del Mar High School, this subject of British Literature is normally taught to seniors, not sophomores.

Despite the frightening newness of this course Felina Danalis, who wants to be a publisher, said, "I really like it. I feel better in here than in College Prep."

Most of the other sophomores also enjoyed the class. Comments such as "The course is great," by Irene Liu, and "I love British Literature," by Barbara Hargrove showed their appreciation of the class.

The new honors English class seemed to have struck the right cord with the students of this school.

Dave Harvey, new teacher from CDM, corrects his British Literature classes' essays on Beowulf.

Relating a personal experience to the story they are studying, Lois Richardson grins at her class.

Pausing for a moment, Leticia Santa Cruz searches her memory for the answer to a comprehension question on her latest quiz.

Helping Students Explore The Wild World Of Reading

Joe Lauer, sophomore, commented, "It's a killer class." Reading Lab, a newly established course, involved individual vocabulary skills, composition, and will eventually include speed reading.

Students earned English credits but needed a teacher recommendation to enroll.

This course was held all six periods and was designed to accommodate any high school student for one semester to two years.

One junior, Brenda Alvarado, said, "It's helped me in reading a lot better than other classes have."

This first year was expensive due to the new equipment, such as headsets and tape players, but will benefit students in the long run by helping them read along with a voice reading the story aloud and understanding comprehension questions.

The students had free reading time with their own choice of books and also participated in co-operative learning through group projects.

Joe Lauer recommended it "fully."

Anxiety

Did you cram for the SAT or one of its offshoots such as the PSAT or SACT?

Or did you study the sample test like the booklet "Taking the SAT" told you to.

One junior, Kris Choi, said, "Sure I'm worried, but I'm going to study for the SAT."

Either way you've experienced something quite unique: SAT midnight madness, as sophomore Barbara Hargrove described it.

There are other terms, ones psychologists might use. Anxiety. Fear of failure.

No matter how prepared you were the first time, you thought you might fail. Some even stayed up half the night before the test, studying in hopes of a good score.

Of course, there were those who didn't really care what they got on the SAT or didn't take it.

They missed out on a nerve-wracking experience. Were they lucky?

Who knows?

Selecting "Winning Position," Joe Lauer prepares himself to read another assignment.

To The Future

The first thing that popped out of junior David Khachadoorian's mouth were the words "fun and easy."

What was he talking about? Math? Yes, math. Algebra II to be exact. To him the class was very challenging.

Khachadoorian intends to use this class as a future reference for his career after high school, which will be in the computer field.

Talking about his teacher Ms. Maureen Cush, he said, "She's great, keeps it simple in class and gives great examples when teaching."

Kachadoorian added, "This class also helps me for my drafting class in finding measurements and the logic behind them."

Khachadoorian's high school training in math will help him throughout the rest of high school and his career afterwards.

Pausing from their work, Charlene Campbell, Dania Brenneise, and Quinn Thomas take their eyes off the board during their pre-algebra class.

Students in Mr. Steve Robitaille's class hopefully wait for him to explain their assignment.

Difficult and Easy- It's All Confusing

Math is a confusing subject for some students.

Many said math was difficult, but some said it was a breeze.

Maria Hernandez commented, "I found math very difficult after my freshman year because going into a new math class is very challenging."

However, Elvira Cervantes said, "Math is very easy for me since it's my favorite subject."

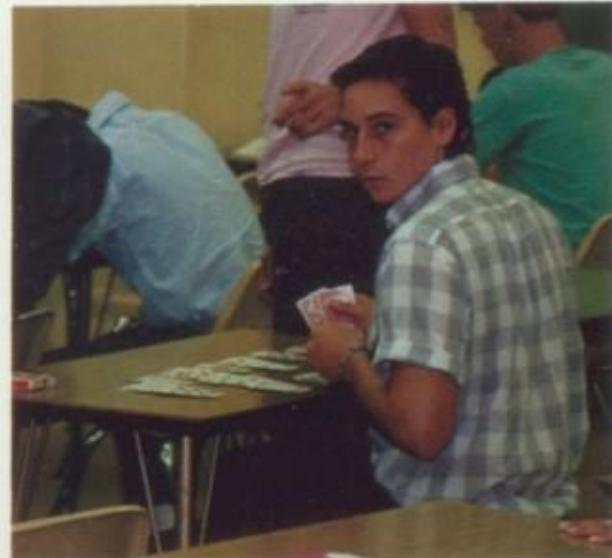

Many students thought it was a miracle that they had reached algebra. Such topics as variables were hard for beginning algebra students.

Lisa De-Long said thankfully, "It took me three years to pass Algebra I, but I finally made it through."

Math can sure be a challenge, but most students need at least a basic understanding from classes such as Basic Math, Pre-Algebra, Algebra I and II, Geometry, Trigonometry, Math Analysis, and Calculus to succeed in life.

Best Artist

Shane Burckle must have something going for him. After all, Mr. Richard Smith and Mrs. Constance Cassidy picked him for best artist.

"He's got a good background in art," said Mr. Smith. Burckle has taken six years of art including two in junior high. "He's one of our trained ones," said Mrs. Cassidy with a chuckle.

Burckle is interested in commercial arts and computer graphics - such as animated logos. "It's a way to express myself," he said.

"One of my main influencers recently is Patrick Nigel, who died a couple years ago," Burckle said.

Burckle entered in a lot of competitions this year, said his teachers. "This should be a big year for Shane," said Mrs. Cassidy.

He had a job at a printing firm this year and plans on pursuing a career in the arts.

Considering a piece that has just fallen off his piled rings, Joshua Kamalani jokingly pretends to eat it while friend Ethan Kolasinski cheers him on.

Showing off his clay creation, Keith Morton balances it on his fist to keep it from completely collapsing.

With delicate strokes and complete concentration, Nichelle Burns paints her art project from one side to the other.

Painting Murals In the Band Pit Making Music A Visual Art

The AP art class decorated the Band Pit first semester. Barbara Har-grove, band member, went into an elaborate description of the murals and ended by saying, "It's really rad."

Many other band members also appreciated the art. "It's unique and totally true because music is art," commented Amy Vail.

The band itself had planned on painting the court last year, but they received the wrong kind of paint, so the paint started peeling off the walls a few months afterwards.

The AP art class also started out with the wrong kind of paint, but corrected their mistake early on in the process of painting.

The band members requested darker colors at this time than the pastels the art class had started with on the backgrounds for the doors.

The murals consist of the flute part of Estancia's Alma Mater coming out of a saxophone, David Pitt directing some choir members, and the words "Music Is Art" on the three doors.

Honors

For the second year, there was an honors program in the history department. The junior honors history class faced extremely difficult assignments. One was the term paper they were required to write at the end of the first quarter, which accounted for one-third to one-quarter of the students' grade. The subject was the causes of the Civil War, and the second half of the quarter was spent preparing for it by reading a series of articles about the War, selecting a point of view, and writing about it.

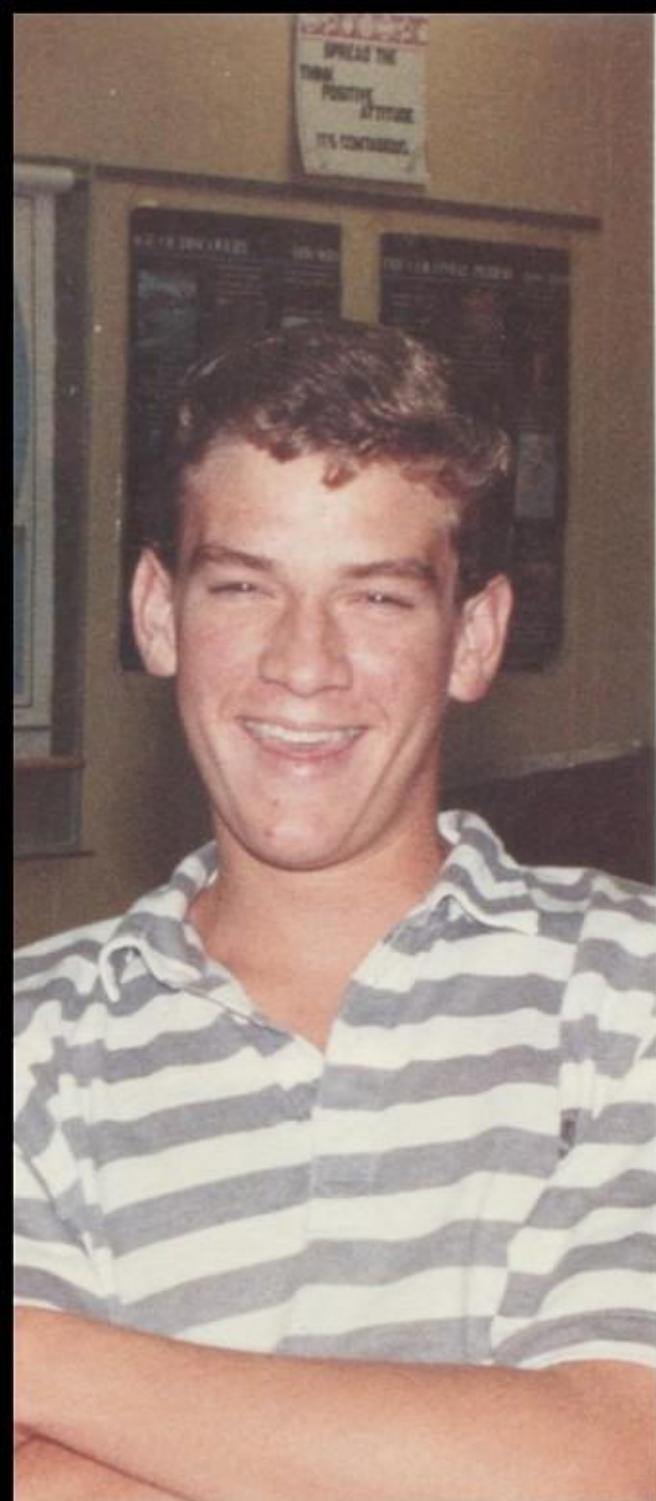

The reason for the paper was to familiarize the students with the skills they would need to have at any university or college they might attend.

The classes were taught by Mr. Lawhorn, Mr. Cutler, and Mrs. Kent, three periods a day.

Brett Barbaro, Lance Ely, and others gather for group discussions in Mr. Lawhorn's junior honors history class.

Friends Jenny Daley and Suzie Garcia relax while they wait for their history class to begin.

George Ehara, Kelly Cowan, and Paul Sallenbach hang out in the history court.

Kellie Wylie answers some of Christie Schwartz's questions in Mr. Moody's constitution class.

No Matter What, History Never Changes.

For some people at Estancia, history was their worst subject and for a few, it was their best. Some students complained that the lectures were dull, while others pointed out that it was what was being said that made them interesting.

Brett Barbaro, who was in Mr. Lawhorn's U.S. History class, thought that History was "boring", but admitted that it was an important subject and said that from it "I learned what not to do if I ever become a politician."

Andy Heidary had a senior history class, and he enjoyed history a lot. He even hoped that one day he would become a historian. He said history was his best subject, and that he liked his history classes at Estancia, and had looked forward to them every day. He explained that the reason he liked history was because, "what you're taught never changes, it always stays the same, no matter what." He also said that through history, "we can learn from our past mistakes what not to do in the future, because the past repeats itself."

For whatever reason, history was a required subject for three years, and the students usually benefitted from it.

What Was That Explosion? Just An Experiment

When most students think of labs, what immediately comes to mind are explosions and smoke coming from the chemistry lab, or frogs being dissected in biology, and students getting sick.

In reality, this rarely happens. The labs done in the science classes require lots of concentration and responsibility. Often, students also manage to have fun while learning the materials.

Jeff Haynes described his marine science labs as "fun until we started studying muscles for three days in a row."

Kris Choi, with a slightly more scientific view on things, said, "The labs were tedious and hazardous to your health, but they gave you a better understanding of why reactions happen." About the sulphur experiment in chemistry, Irene Liu said, "It was supposed to do that. Just because our reaction didn't smell good doesn't mean it didn't work."

If you want to pass physics, Jon Pickett had the perfect answer. "The only thing more important than physics labs is sleep."

Kim Quirk looks up from her notes during a science lecture to see there is still fifteen minutes left to go.

Shawn Langer examines his specimen: a leaf sample, under a high-power microscope to find the chloroplasts.

Kim Quirk and Amy Wilcox doubt an answer put forth while discussing their homework assignment.

Insects!

One of the most dreaded aspects of biology for students was the insect collection. Students in Mr. Tom Fisher's biology class weren't required to make an insect collection as "he thinks they're useless," said Barbara Hargrove with a grin.

However, the unfortunate students in Mr. Ed Wynkoop's class had to make one around May.

None of the students were looking forward to collecting and mounting the specimens. Heather Horvat claimed she didn't understand why they had to "go out, catch the bugs, kill them, and pin them to a board. That's being too cruel to the bugs."

Debbie Hargrove pictured above with an insect collection commented that "making it wouldn't be too bad, but collecting the insects would be the worst part, looking under rocks and stones and such."

"The idea of pinning the insects to a board and spreading their wings out and all does not appeal to me," said Jennifer Stark.

Buenos Dias! Guten Tag! Bonjour! Hello! How Do You Say, "Hello?"

There are a lot of reasons for taking a foreign language. For some students the only reason was because it was required. However, for most, foreign language was an enjoyable challenge - even though it may have been difficult, they enjoyed "learning a new culture and language," as Veronica Nardi explained.

Jenna Garmon took Spanish instead of German or French because "I'll have a use for it in my life - Spanish is becoming more prevalent here. After all, we live right next to Mexico. It isn't as if we were next door to France or something."

A teacher of German, Gunilla

Svendsen, said, "Learning a foreign language and a new culture will promote understanding between people of different backgrounds."

"I love foreign language," exclaimed Jennifer Duffy. "It makes me feel neat to know another language. I go around saying 'Hola!'"

Glancing up from her German assignment, Norita Jaeger pauses to brush her hair back from her face.

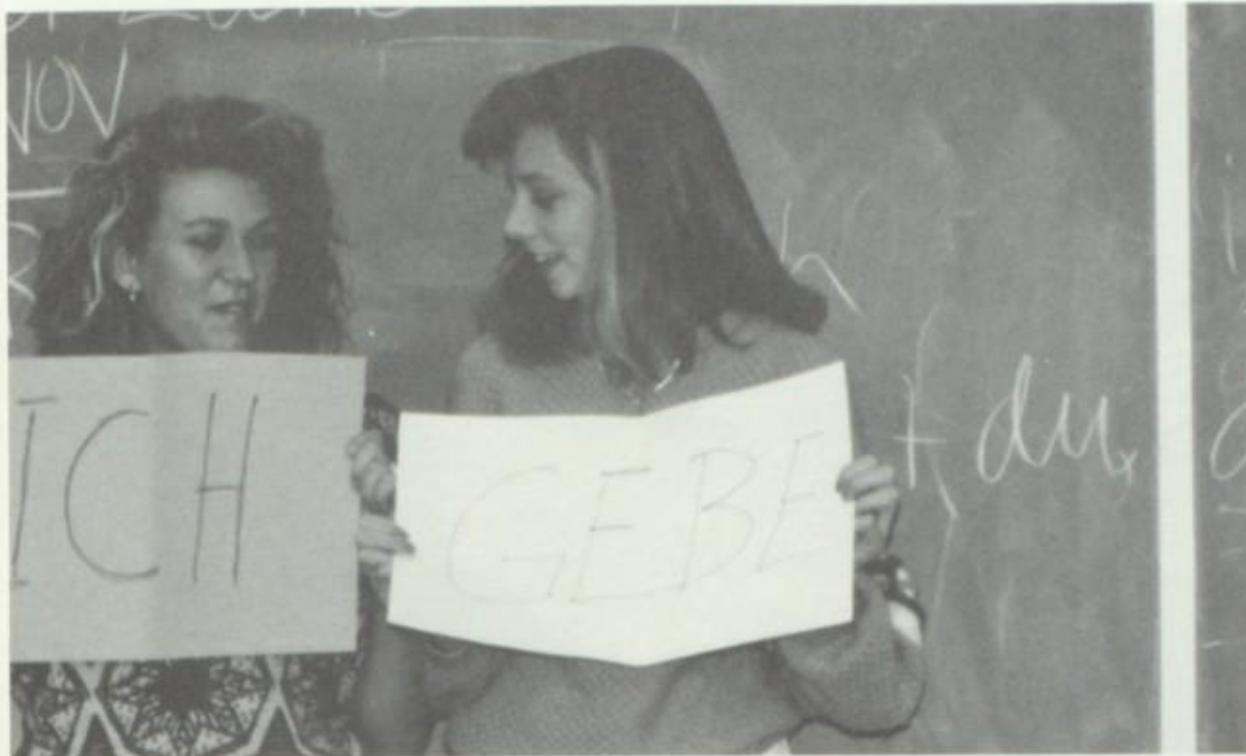

Listening to their teacher explain the class assignment, Jenni Sheldon nods in understanding.

Lisa Buffa and Shane Huang offer a possible answer to a question in a group discussion.

Kirsten Spain and Liz Linn compare signs "ich" and "gebe" meaning "I give" in a drill on word order in German sentences.

Foreign Exchange

The booklets about foreign exchange programs promise a great deal, such as becoming fluent in a foreign language, learning about a new culture, even starting to dream and understand the dream in that language, and more. Could this be true?

A student from Germany had the inclination to come here from her homeland and brave the challenges of being immersed in a totally different culture. Her name was Judith Kopf and she stayed with the O'Conner family, who hosted an exchange student from Sweden last year.

Apparently the booklets weren't just kidding for Kopf began dreaming in English on and off about the third month of her stay.

Having had four years of English at school, Kopf didn't get quite the same language shock as someone who didn't know a word of the language. However, she said it was still hard because they only learned simple sentences like "My name is Judith" and "This is a flower."

Mr. Granite teaches Safety education. Because of the number of students who take the course, it is also offered before school.

Necessary

"I was scared to death because I had never driven before. It was easy after I got started, though," Terri Wagner said about the first time she went for behind-the-wheel. Behind-the-wheel and simulator was something that almost all high school students experienced. It was necessary to participate if a driver's license was to be acquired before the eighteenth birthday. "It was pretty boring, nothing exciting happened," Brant Graff said about his simulator experience. Most students shared his opinion on the simulator, as they were excited to get to the good stuff, behind-the-wheel.

Alex Francois practices her running back stinch on a dress.

Two Classes Teaching Something That You Have To Know

Face it. Safety education and homemaking do not have much in common, except for one thing — they both teach vital skills.

In today's world, not being able to drive is a definite setback in Southern California, especially with the bus system being so poor. "I can't wait until Driver's ed. Nor being able to drive would keep me from getting a job,"

Jennifer Pantleo said. In the state of California, a provisional license may not be acquired unless safety ed. has been completed.

A husband should not want to go visit his mom because his wife cannot cook and his shirt buttons need to be sewed back on. The homemaking court is a place where people can get the basic necessities of both sewing and cooking. For Christmas, the advanced foods class made elaborate desserts as pictured below. Sewing varied from the running back stitch (basic sewing stitch) to embroidery.

If these classes were not offered in high school, they would have to be learned from the parents. And if they did not know . . .

Listening to lectures helps to understand cooking techniques, as they are explained in depth to Staci Jordan, Wilma Allen, and Janet Clost.

Some of the delicious treats the advanced foods class prepared.

Babies!

"I love it! I kind of mother these babies, and they love me so much!" exclaimed Amy Kantrowicz with enthusiasm. Like many other students, she was involved with a program known as ROP or Regional Occupational Program. This program gave her a chance to experiment with her possible future occupation, which was medicine, without a lifetime commitment.

For a student hoping to become a doctor, it was a good way to come in contact with the patients, while finding out whether it was what she "really wanted to do".

Of course, there were some disadvantages to the program. The participant was expected to attend several mandatory meetings and, some times, endure other ordeals.

"The other day, a baby threw up on my uniform."

CROP's Got A New Name But It Doesn't Change The Game

Coastline Regional Occupational Program (ROP), formerly known as CROP, was part of a statewide program providing service to high school students and adults. Priority was given to seniors, next came juniors, anyone who was 16, and even adults could take classes through ROP.

The job-training program offered through the Department of Education gave the students a chance to explore potential career choices. They had the opportunity to see if the field of occupation they were interested in was really the best choice.

Mrs. Joan Palmer, who ran the program at Estancia, said, "An important reason for taking an ROP course is that it gives students marketable skills."

After taking an ROP course, students said that it made it easier to find a job, and they generally had a starting salary higher than minimum wage. Students also received five to ten credits per semester for participating.

A new class was offered second semester called Security Alarm Systems Installer, for which students had to be 18 to get the necessary security clearance.

The "new" ROP is always offering new experiences.

Best Photographer

Of all Mr. Dale Waters' beginning photographers, one stood out from the rest; she was Tracy Hoffman.

Mr. Waters had a lot of praise for this one student: "She gets her work in on time - usually two or three days before anyone else, and she's a perfectionist so her work is very good."

And that's not all he had to say for this outstanding student: "She is excellent at taking pictures and tests, and she's interested in photography."

Hoffman said she enjoys photography. She liked "learning all the aspects of it like developing the film and such."

Although Hoffman does so well in photography, she doesn't plan on it being anything more than a hobby after high school. However, Mr. Waters thought photography will play some role in her life to come.

Why kick back in industrial arts? Kick in and have fun!

For many, industrial arts classes were complete kick-back classes. They did just enough to pass and talked and laughed with their friends most of the time.

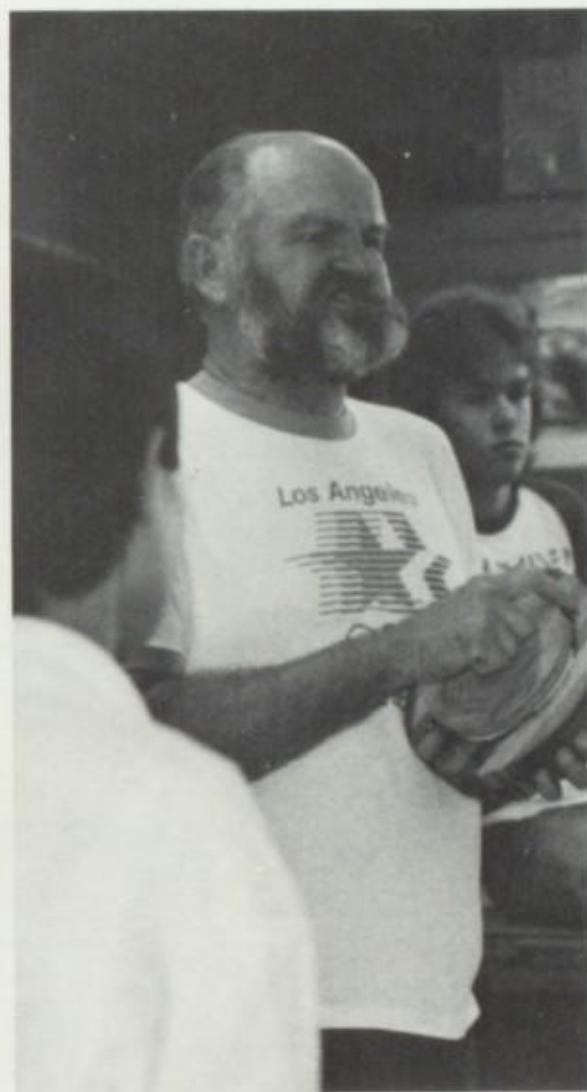

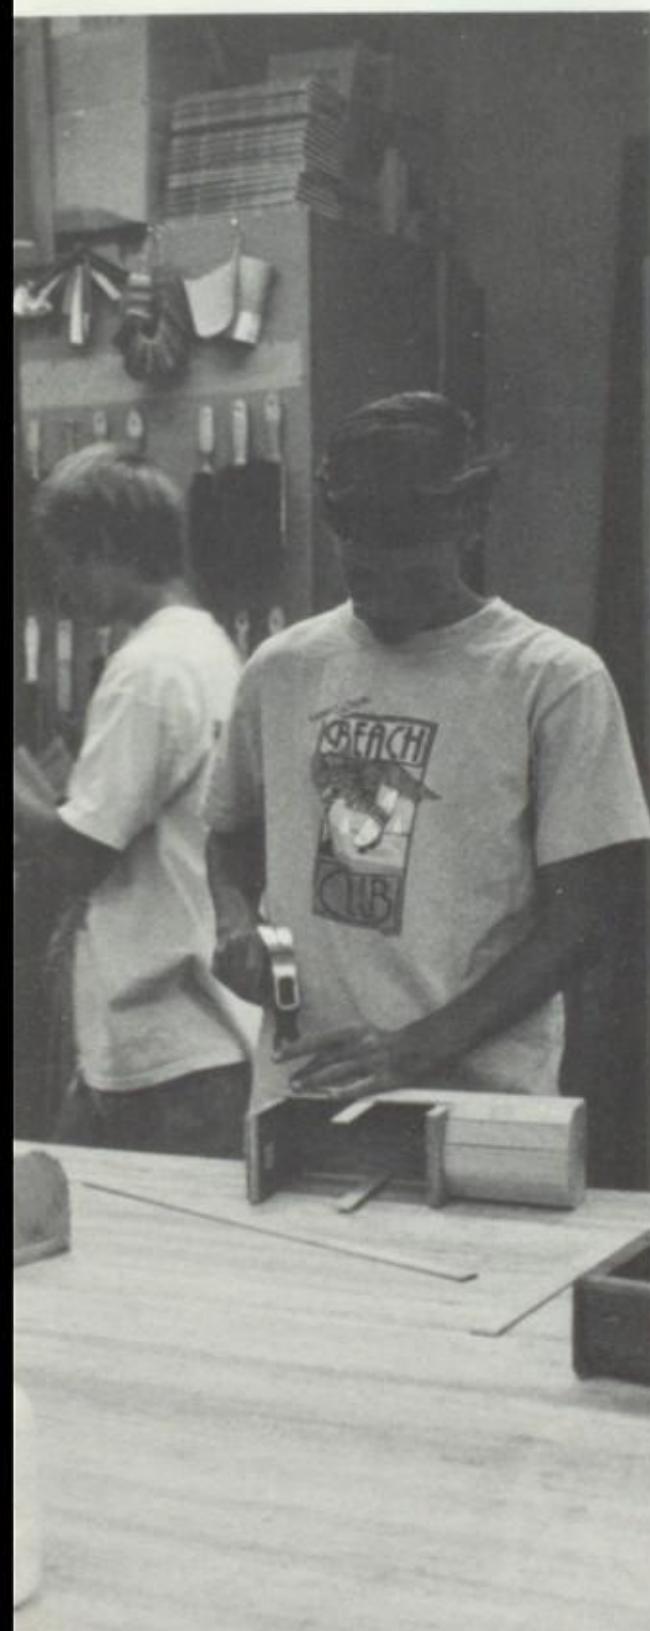

However, for some students, industrial arts classes, such as metal shop, wood shop, drafting and photography, were fun classes because of the type of work involved.

Mark Spontelli, who has taken three years of drafting, said, "I love it because I like to work at it. It doesn't make you feel bored."

There were a number of new computers for Mr. Ed Conway's drafting classes that were available to all drafting students. The students learned first how to command the computer and draw on the screen, and then were given assignments of things to draw out on the computer, which is not always an easy task.

Industrial arts classes were often quite enjoyable for students. They learned subjects that may help them in future careers in engineering, construction, architecture, as well as other fields.

An Open Mind Towards The Future Leads To Business

The business court is where many people find their interest in clerical work, bookkeeping, and computers. As Chris Bilinski said, "It gives me an open mind towards the future." Bilinski was taking word processing with Mr. Chute. The computer classes Mr. Chute taught were the basis for the future of many students here at Estancia.

In the business court, consumer math was also taught. This class was taught by Mr. Palmer and John Beth described it this way, "Easy. Fun. Mr. Palmer is an excellent teacher." Beth has learned to balance a check book; something he did not know how to do before.

Last, but not least, a computer programming class was taught by Mr. Cutforth. Olivier Pougnand found Mr. Cutforth's class "interesting". As an extra bonus, he can now write programs in pascal!

Christie Stacey saves her program on disk during computers.

Michelle Torrance, Cindy Freund, and Mr. Palmer are a friendly trio during accounting.

The Apple Computer class is as much fun as it is hard work for Sam Espinoza and Jason White.

Computer Age

For many people, computers are simply an "immensely complex" object that has many keyboards and strange graphs. However, every-day, more and more men and women use the computer to help with their careers and personal lives. Of course, along with its growing popularity, more Estancia students participated in computer courses. Estancia had one of the most extensive computer programs in the area. The money for the computers came from Coastline Regional Occupation Program. This program offered students a chance for hands-on training.

Stephany San Jose, a first year computer class student, stated, "I want to be a lawyer and I thought that computers would help me list all of my clients!"

TV Career?

The Switcher-Fader club helped to promote student interest in television, film, or radio as a career. The officers of the club were Angela Busi, Zonia Gomez, and Yami Franco (pictured above).

The projects included field trips to television studios to view how network programs were video-taped.

The club traveled to Hollywood and Studio City to see the programs "Second Chance" and "My Two Dads". They later attended the taping of "Love Connection" and "Will Shriner Show" in Los Angeles and Hollywood.

The proceeds from these field trips went to a scholarship for a student interested in pursuing a career in the broadcasting field.

Cameras and Keyboards In TV Productions

"T.V. Productions and Mr. James Daley have both given me the chance to see what I'm going to do with my life", said Litisha Pauli.

T.V. Productions introduced students to the world of television. They learned about the work involved in the production of television programs. This included learning how to operate the video tape recorder, the tape recorder, and the lightboard.

Some of the projects of the course included a music video, a commercial, a drama scene, a newscast, and a sportscast.

Behind the camera skills as well as acting in front of the camera enabled students to experience the total activities involved in broadcasting.

Honoring The Best And The Brightest

"It's a thrill to watch these young people accomplish so much," said Sheila Horman, referring to the recipients of various awards given at the annual Honors Banquet.

Ms. Horman was the Scholarship Advisor and School Improvement

Program Coordinator and was again the organizer and driving force behind the annual Honors Banquet, held on June 1.

The banquet was held in the Commons and was catered by the school cafeteria with students helping to serve the food. Again, the banquet was a big success and lasted until late into the night.

At the banquet many students were honored.

Valedictorian

Glenn Desandre

Salutatorians

Michael Horansky and Debra Cook

Army Scholar Athlete Awards

An Nguyen and Kent French

Bank of America Awards

Several students were honored because of their outstanding achievements in a specific area or a specific department.

Area recipients were: Glenn Desandre in Fine Arts, Michael Horansky in Science and Math, Loan Lam in Fine Arts, and Kathy Nichols in Liberal Arts.

Department recipients were: Jonathan Bube (Math), Debra Cook (English), Jacqueline Elias (Business), Dina Fayer (Social Studies), Lazaro Garcia (Art), Tracy Hoffman

(Foreign Language), Mark Korando (Trades and Industry), Michele Mosbacher (Computer Science), Kari Nasby (Drama), Jonathan Pickett (Lab. Science), Annalynn Rebkowitz (Home Economics), and Russell Rowland.

Brian Hoo Award

This award was given to two exceptional students, Gina Meola and Bruce King, who exceeded their own or others' expectations of them.

Century III Leadership Award

Michele May received this award for having identified a future problem and given a potential solution to it in an essay on the topic "Projection for Innovative Leadership."

D.A.R. Award

This award, given by the Daughters of the American Revolution, was won by Kathy Nichols for outstanding citizenship.

E. I. Moore Award

The Masonic Lodge honored eight outstanding students, a boy and a girl from each grade level. They were: Samantha Joyner and Torrey Hammond, freshmen; Irene Liu and Oliver Wright, sophomores; Julie Chen and Mark Hartley, juniors; and Laura Varzak and Glenn Desandre, seniors.

Girl's State Award

This award was given to junior Kris Choi, who would travel to Sacramento for one week to participate in an experience in state government.

Soroptimist International Award

Rob Myhre was honored for outstanding citizenship.

Glenn Desandre, Valedictorian and winner of many other awards.

Michael Horansky, Salutatorian and National Merit Scholar.

Sheila Horman, in charge of banquet and chairperson of the scholarship committee.

National Merit Scholars

Finalists were Michael Horansky and Dina Fayer. Commended were Glenn Desandre, Binh V. Nguyen and Jonathan Pickett.

Excellence By The Month

Although not honored at the banquet, several other students excelled and received commendations throughout the year.

Rotary Students of the Month

October: Laura Varzak and Glenn Desandre

November: Karen Farquhar and David Westman

December: Cindy Rowell and Parker Steele

January: Elena Birch and Brett Moody

February: Kari Nasby and Robert Myhre

March: Michele May and Scott Freeman

Debra Cook, Salutatorian and Bank of America award recipient for English.

Michele May, Century III Leadership award recipient.

Zonta Girl of the Month

Zonta, the international organization of executive business women, honored senior girls who had demonstrated excellent qualities of scholarship and leadership.

October: Michele May

November: Kathy Nichols

December: Laura Varzak

January: Anda Liu

February: Karen Farquhar

March: Kari Nasby

Zorba Boy of the Month

The student store gave a Zorba award to boys who showed outstanding school involvement.

October: Todd Brooks

November: Brant Graff

December: Marcus Walburger

January: Russell Wilson

February: Russell Shane

Adaptive P.E.

Adaptive Physical Education was about the same as general P.E., but modified. For instance, the students in Adaptive P.E. walked along a set course instead of ran, lifted weights to music, participated in half-court basketball in the girls' gym, and so on.

Many of the students really enjoyed the class. Rachel Jortner liked the class because "it's very small. You get a lot of attention from the instructor, and you get to know each other really well."

Kim Chandronait commented that their instructor, Craig Collins, was "an easy teacher to get along with." Jortner interjected that Collins was "more understanding."

Clayton McKinney especially enjoyed lifting weights "to build up my arm muscles."

"I enjoy the walking part because I get to see a lot of my friends and talk with them," said Minh Nguyen.

Jumping slightly to make the shot, David Trout watches the ball arc towards the basket, hoping it will go in.

Octavio Echegaray quickly snatches a pass and starts to turn for a shot on the basket.

Get out in that fresh air and Get that blood pumping

Physical education, commonly known as P.E., was for many an exciting class. They got to get out into the fresh air and get their blood pumping, while also being with their friends.

Students enjoyed a variety of activities including volleyball, basketball, and badminton.

said, "I like doing the activities and talking with my friends at the same time."

However, freshman Rosa Gil had more specific likes - badminton, "especially when I win." Gil also had a group of about ten friends to talk with during P.E.

Kirk Delong also enjoyed socializing during P.E. and being able to have fun playing a sport as well.

"My favorite part is that there is no homework or written quizzes and tests," said Richard Berends.

P.E. is a required course for at least two years, but students could have taken two years of athletics or marching band or adaptive P.E. instead of a general P.E. course.

Steve Aston dribbles the ball down the court at a dead run.

Chris King darts around members of the other team in preparation for a layup.

Hoo Memorial

The Bryan Hoo Memorial Award is given each year to students who worked extra hard in their classes and exceeded their own or others' expectations, and who overcame their handicap.

Two of the 1987 recipients were Stephan Smith and Eric Heslington (pictured above).

The award was established in 1985 by Mr. and Mrs. Hoo in memory of their son Bryan, a former student at Estancia, who died in 1983.

Nominations for the award could be made by teachers, staff, or students.

Overcoming Difficulties And Succeeding In Achieving Their Goals

Did you know that Albert Einstein and Winston Churchill had difficulties passing basic classes in school? In their days, no special programs existed for students with learning difficulties. However today, schools are required by law to offer classes for students with identified learning disabilities.

Special education here consisted of two Resource Specialist Program (RSP) classes and two Special Day

Classes (SDC) taught by Gerry Luman, Toni Acone, Gale Kirk and Ray Hurt.

RSP and SDC emphasized basic skills, "survival" skills, and vocational training. "We are proud of the way our students were able to achieve their expected goals," said Mrs. Luman.

Classes were small to encourage individualized instruction and give students extra help with their regular classes.

Yolanda Cervantes liked her special classes. "They helped me a lot in my studies. Without the help I probably would have flunked most classes."

They also helped students prepare for proficiency tests. "Being in the program was worth it, because I was able to pass all proficiency tests before my senior year," said Richard Watts.

Understanding

"We are like a big family", stated Kym Krankewicz. This year, many Estancia students were given a chance to participate in a new program called the Stop-in-Corner headed by Gary Johnston, Julie Horn (pictured) and Lynn Bloomberg.

After a semester of training in a regular Peer Counseling course, each student became eligible to help other students as a Peer Counselor. Many students had to either stay after school or arrive to the class at seven o'clock in the morning, but most felt that the sacrifice was worth it.

"This program helped me understand myself and keep my sanity", explained Andy Felix, a dedicated Peer Counselor.

By having someone to talk to of their own age, the students found it easier to open up and help themselves.

Studying in a New Language

"ESL is a sheltered English class for language minority students," said Mr. Janu Juarez. "Here in this atmosphere they can learn the basic literacy skills. This year's ESL class had a variety of different nationalities. For example, students from Poland, Lebanon, Mexico, El Salvador and also Vietnam were in the class." Javier Gomez said, "When I first got involved in ESL, I didn't think much of it, but now I can really see the good it did for me."

Angelica Lopez said, "ESL was helpful to me mainly in developing my reading skills and communicating with others."

Estancia also had a program to help those students whose families were agriculturally employed. This program was Migrant Ed. headed by Ms. Isabelle Venson. The students were involved in after school study sessions to help meet their educational needs. Students could get individual help not only with their school work but also academic advisement or they could just work on social skills if needed.

Carol Aguiar said, "I love it. It helped me with my schoolwork and also helped me prepare for college."

During Migrant Ed., Leticia Santa-Cruz vigorously studies for her classes.

In the library, Maria Diaz practices hard to excel in her school work.

ESL students Roberto Contreras, Maria Alvarez, and Caesar Asaro listen to Mr. Noe Guevara's fascinating speech on geography.

"The Dining Room" and "Babes In Arms" From Fall To Spring

The drama department produced two excellent plays: "The Dining Room" in the fall and "Babes In Arms," a musical, in the spring.

The "Dining Room" is a somewhat unconventional play in that it doesn't really have one story line about one set of characters.

Instead, it centers around one room, the dining room, relating the sad decrease of the dining room's value in society from the days of glamorous dinners in the early 20th century to its neglect in more modern times.

For example, in one modern scene, an architect is trying to convince the owner of the house, a psychiatrist, to make the dining room into a new office. Another scene from earlier times has a maid and her mistress preparing the room for a grand banquet.

In "Babes In Arms," the action revolves around a group of apprentice actors and actresses waiting for their big break, which they hope will come with the arrival of a play called the "Deep North."

Val (Kevin Keith) and Susie (Kari Nasby), for instance, had an understanding going until beautiful Jennifer Owen (Dara Aicklen), star of the "Deep North," comes into Val's life and steals his heart.

Although this is not the only problem that arises for the apprentices in this musical, it all works out to a happy ending.

Stagecraft

Just exactly who are those students "behind the scenes" in drama production, anyway?

These students take a class called stagecraft, taught by Mrs. Constance Cassady, which involves building and painting the scenery and working with lights and other technical aspects of production.

As Amy Young described it: "Mrs. Cassady asks you to make, for instance, a dining room, and then you get to decide how the room should look. It's very creative; that's what I like about stagecraft: creativity."

Jason Goddard enjoyed stagecraft because "you get to build things and paint them."

Other students enjoyed stagecraft for simpler reasons. "All my friends are in it," said Henry Vandoorn with a shrug.

"One great thing about stagecraft is that you get to leave the classroom whenever you want," said Lee Queener with a grin.

In rehearsal for "Babes In Arms," Susie (Kari Nasby) forgives Val (Kevin Keith) for his adventurous fling with Jennifer Owen.

Peggy (J. Burden) hails her conversation with Ted (K. Keith) about their adulterous affair to speak with her daughter (A. Lawson) in the "Dining Room."

From Baby Drama To Production In The Spotlight

"Baby" or beginning drama is one of the first steps to production drama at Estancia.

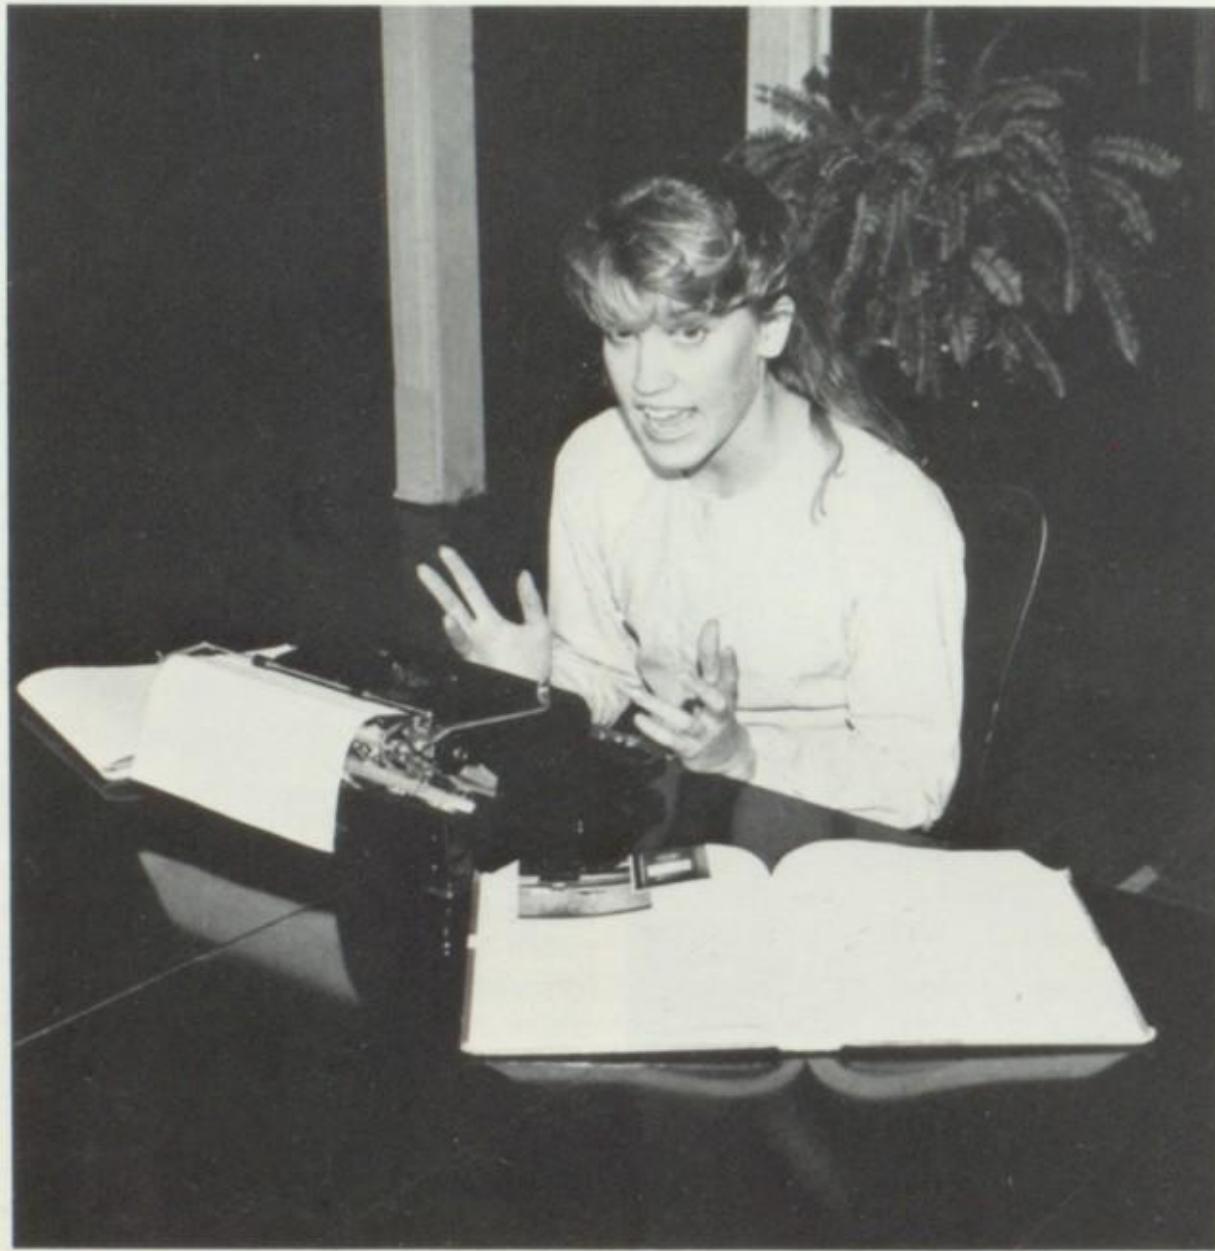

Many drama students had fond memories of "baby" drama. Jennifer Stark said, "My freshman year, I took baby drama, and I really enjoyed it."

For Samantha Fuerbringer, baby drama wasn't the first step of her interest in drama: "I saw 'Annie' when I was little, and from then on I wanted to act and become an actress like her."

Quite a few drama students began with classes in elementary school. Julie Burden didn't start out with acting, though. "I've always been interested in the behind the scenes stuff like lights and directing. It was only in ninth grade in baby drama that I started to enjoy the acting part."

Lisa Freeman summed it all up when she said, "It's just the greatest feeling."

Playing a modern woman in the "Dining Room," Kari Nasby emphatically explains why she must use the dining room table for her term paper.

Shocked, Terry (Rachel Estrella) draws her hand away from Gus' (John Decker) proposal in rehearsal for "Babes in Arms"

Phyllis Owen (Samantha Fuerbringer) gives some advice on boys to her daughter, Jennifer Owen (Dara Aicklen), during rehearsal for "Babes In Arms."

In the "Dining Room," Russell Wilson attempts to bring his "mother," Sue Brackett, back to the here and now by showing her the familiar view through the French doors.

Phyllis Owen (Samantha Fuerbringer) and Fleming (Marcus Walburger) discover that love doesn't only happen to young people.

Aloha!

Aloha folks and welcome to Hawaii! This year the Choral and Band groups took a wild tour to Hawaii, the island of wonderful tropics!

On March 27th everyone left with high spirits and hopes of new adventures. Most were looking forward to, as Robert Scott said, "getting leied as we get off the plane!" With beautiful flowers as a welcome they were hoping for the best. "It's great!" As Russell Rowland put it, "I've never been there and I will probably never get another chance to go again!"

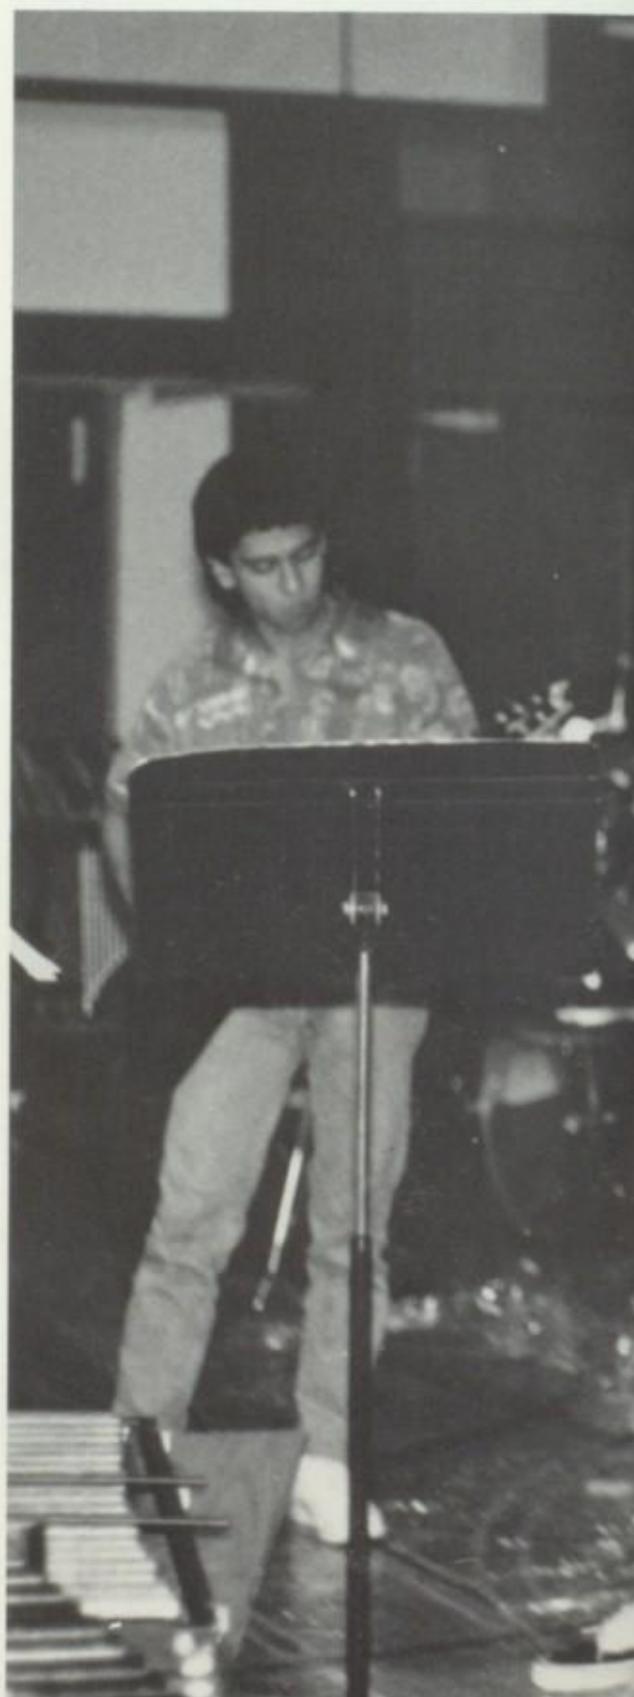

The tour consisted of competitions for every group. It was true national competition for schools from all over the United States. David Daymon believed it would be a chance to "show off our awesome Choir!" And Dawn Hauck believed "it will be fun if we get the band together and win!"

But the thing that will probably be most remembered is as Daymon said, "Coconuts, big coconuts, and the cultural shock of seeing beautiful women and experiencing exotic new beaches!"

Showing his talent Jason Fain serenades the crowd.

The Rockers of the future Al Pena, Justin Maiz, and Chris Blakely, show us the true spirit of Rock -n- Roll!

New Classes At EHS Are Red Hot!

To our high school it's been a good year but to the Estancia Band classes it's been extra special. This year three new classes were started: Precision Dance and Silks team, String Ensemble, and the Rockin' and Rollin' sounds of Rock Ensemble.

Precision Dance and Silks was new to our Marching Band. They performed in parades with the band, along with private competitions. Also new was the requirement that starting in 1987 you must have at least one year of Precision Dance to become a cheerleader.

One of the Silks team captains, Chris

De Sandre, said, "People are doing things together, there's more unity."

One of the Dance captains, Laura Robbins, said, "It's a chance to do more with our abilities, we are able to get up and perform and do what we like to do in front of people!"

String Ensemble which consisted of four string instruments and one clarinet, was also a new class. Wi-Chou Kyao believed "It's challenging, it gives you more talent, kind of like a hobby."

"But it's also great that Mr. Wolf, the teacher of the new class, has patience with us," said Elvia Arellana.

"If we make a mistake he's very understanding, he helps us out!"

But the newest and most unusual class was Rock Ensemble. "It's a band to play in" as Mr. Wolf described it. "It allows them to learn a different style of music, and they get credit for it." Or as Chris Blakely put it, "It's something different in school to do and it's the only class I wouldn't skip!". Some of the students in the class are also in bands outside school such as Justic Maiz and Eric Kistler's band "Battery". And they all seemed to think "We be Jammin'"

A depressed shopkeeper assesses the damage in his shop from the 6.1 earthquake that hit the area in October. Fortunately the quake was not catastrophic.

Quaking And Shaking At 6.1

Solid earth shook and buckled beneath our feet. The Richter scale said it was only a 6.1, but it seemed a lot stronger at Estancia.

All of Southern California from San Diego to San Francisco felt its effects and the effects of its three point aftershocks as well.

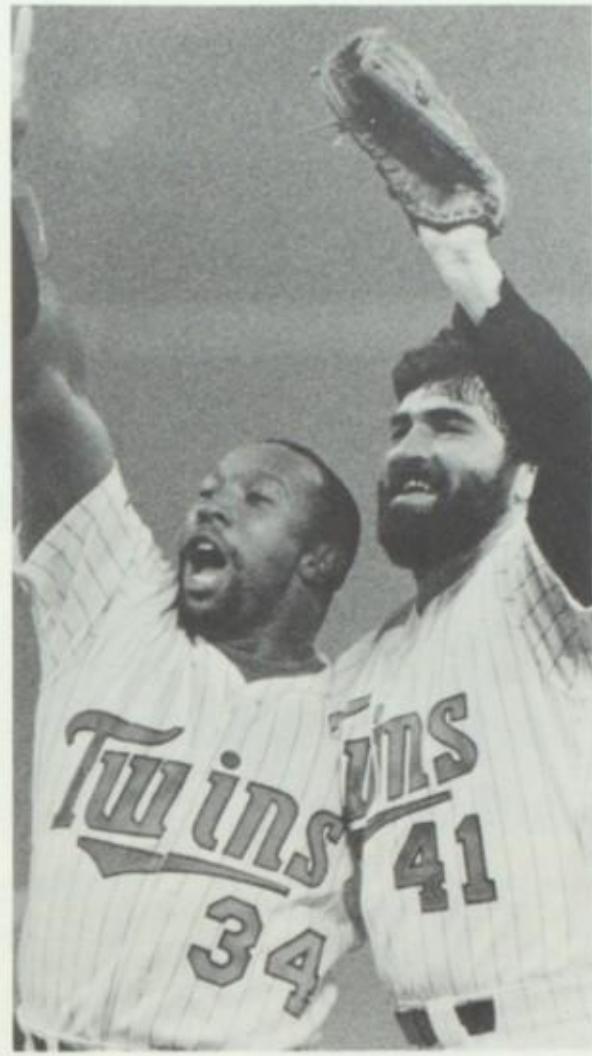

It occurred just before first period, while many students were still arriving at school. Students' legs buckled in the halls, sign posts swayed outside, and quite a few drivers on the freeways pulled over because they thought they had a flat tire.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver "Ollie" L. North was involved with the plan to finance the anti-government Contras in Nicaragua with money from arm sales to Iran.

Wall Street suffered a "Black Monday" October 19, proving once and for all that Fridays really aren't the unluckiest day of the week, even if they are on the thirteenth.

Kirby Puckett and Jeff Reardon of the Minnesota Twins celebrate their World Series victory of 4-2 over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Scandalous

Scandals, scandals everywhere. Gary Hart dropped out of the running for democratic candidate when the press uncovered his romantic excursions with Donna Rice, however he came back into the race in January.

Lt. Col. Oliver "Ollie" North, Judge Robert Bork, and others also took part in varied scandals.

Robert Bork, seen by some as a brilliant judge and by others as a dangerous extremist, was President Ronald Reagan's nomination to Supreme Court, but he was turned down by Senate.

But not all was bad. Pope John Paul II arrived in America for a nine day tour, and the Golden Gate bridge celebrated its 50th anniversary.

Of course, Wall Street "crashed." The Dow Jones average fell a total of 502 points on October 19, 1987. This "crash" was called by some a "meltdown" and by others "Black Monday."

The Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco celebrated its 50th birthday. About 250,000 people crammed onto the bridge.

Dennis Conner on Stars & Stripes completed a 4-0 sweep over Australia's Kookaburra III in the America Cup.

Student Senate

The government at E.H.S. took a decidedly more democratic turn as student Senate was initiated.

This organization consisted of elected students from every fourth period class. The purpose was to act as a medium between the principal, Dr. Robert Francy, and the students - ASB.

Mark Korando described it as "discussing present practices that need to be discussed for the purpose of improving or changing them to benefit the student body."

Students learned the news and changes immediately after the meeting or early the next day from their Senators.

Carol Zambel and Gary Bondoc imagine what the senior lawn will look like with the new low stone wall and new turf.

Mark Korando and Jason Fain, members of the student senate, discuss the issues of teen drinking and smoking.

Al Matz makes his rounds at the earthquake preparedness drill, which was organized by the teachers.

Juniors proudly display their school spirit during a pep assembly by waving a flag with their graduation year: '89, painted on it in red.

A solemn crowd gathered for a speech by an ex-convict from the Mafia who came to draw students away from crime and towards the better life he never had.

Senior Lawn?

Where did it go? The "Senior" lawn seemed to have been hit by a rebellious plow truck just before school started.

Actually, the district planned to tear up Senior Lawn so they could redo the irrigation system, turn part of it into a patio, and resurf the rest.

Other portions of our school were also improved. New murals were painted on the passageway between the boys' gym and the swimming pool.

Pep assemblies certainly "improved" as they got the rowdiest ever as students dressed up, waved makeshift flags, and even the freshman section took part.

In Memory

The Prophet

Your children are not your children.
They come through you but not from you,
You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.
The archer bends you with His might that
His arrows may go swift and far.
Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness;
For even as He loves the arrow that flies, so
He loves the bow that is stable.

Flash On Clubs

Clubs are something that fill time during and after school. The members make people feel good with the good deeds that they do. Clubs are a way to make friends and have a good time. Different clubs fulfill people's different needs. The variety of clubs on this campus is extensive. There are clubs you have to join before you can be in an activity, there are clubs that do charity work, and there are clubs for people who just want to have fun. Everyone was welcomed to join in.

The Spanish club joins in the Walk For Hunger.

On Top Of It All

There's snow doubt about it! Ski club this year was the best ever. Club members went to Utah, Mammoth, and Colorado, along with local day trips to Snow Summit. "The trips were a lot of fun because there were so many more people this year," said Elena Birch.

With the help of club advisors, Carol Nohra, Mike Fisher and president Elena Birch, ski club designed and sold T-shirts and candy to help get special deals on great trips.

With the increase in people and interest, ski club had many new opportunities for fun, and look forward to when they can rendez-vous at the top of a mountain, and be "powder bound" once again.

When it came to spirit, pep club was definitely on top. Pep club was the first step to becoming a cheerleader. Monica Caballero said, "I've been in pep club for two years. It's a lot of fun."

Girls joined the club to show their spirit while they earned the points they needed to be able to try out for the cheerleading squad. Points were awarded for painting signs, going to a lot of the sporting events, and showing their Eagles' pride around campus. At meetings, members talked about upcoming games, fund raising, and of course, points! After earning enough points, and going to a majority of the meetings, the pep club members were ready to try out for the cheerleading squad and show their Eagles' pride.

Joined In Festival

It was an extremely active year for the Language Clubs.

Sarah Miller, French Club president said "Having the guest speaker was very educational." French Club invited other speakers, had a Christmas party, went on field trips to French films, and were involved in the Foreign Language Food Festival in March.

German Club went to German Camp in October and March where students spoke only German. Estancia's Octoberfest, a successful celebration with bratwurst and knockwurst, served as a "dress rehearsal" for the Foreign Language Food Festival, according to president Elizabeth Linn.

Spanish Club also prospered. The members, along with president Marty Dahl, decided to get involved with community work for a change. They participated in the March for Hunger and sent money to the Spanish Orphanage. Of course, they also were involved in the Foreign Language Food Festival.

In German Camp, Brett Saunders is the King in the Folk Story Rumplestiltskin.

Little Sharks

"It makes people more interesting. It just does!" exclaimed Bruce King. For those involved, the Forensic team offered a unique experience.

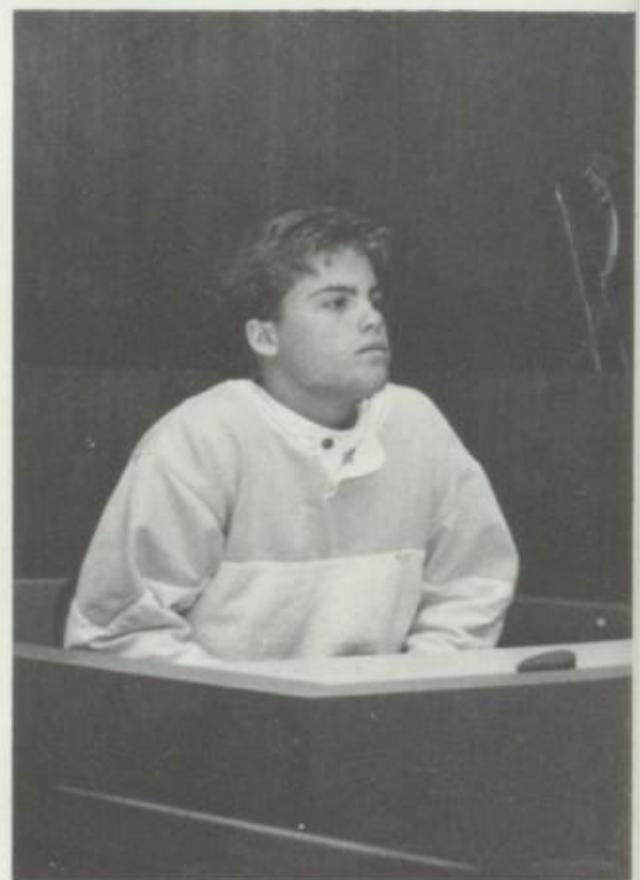

"I found out that speech isn't only for the 'A students'!", commented Dana Tunnicliffe.

For the team, the goal was to learn how to speak effectively and have fun. While learning the art of talking, the students met people, who were not only intellectual but also turned out to be great friends.

They were the speech team Estancia will never forget.

Another activity concerning oratory skills was the Mock Trial. The students were expected to fit into a role and be quick thinking. It was a good way of getting involved with the court system for those interested in law.

"I learned a lot, and it drew completely opposite people together under common alliance", explained Brian Forbath.

Taking a stand for the defense, Oliver Wright carefully listens to the cross-examination questions.

Off The Wall

"It was fun and off the wall", commented Dana Fayer about Academic Decathlon.

This competition was for any student who wanted to be well rounded in all subjects. The participants committed themselves to intense studying every morning at seven. In fact, the students found out that the most difficult thing was to survive the pressure. To do this, they displayed a tremendous team work.

"Well, my strong point is music. So I tutored those who weren't so sure about the subject", explained Rachel Kent.

Their hard work paid off, and for the first time, the Estancia Academic Decathlon team placed within top ten in the league.

Another source of brain power was C.S.F. In order to be a member, the student had to have at least 3.5 G.P.A., and pay 75 cents for the membership.

"I lost 75 cents, but it was definitely worth it!" exclaimed Mary-Anne Mosher.

For A Good Cause

Two popular service clubs were Girls' League and Key Club. Both were involved with helping others. The plans for Girls' League included an ice cream social fundraiser, working with SOS, adopting a family, and baskets for Easter. The officers were president Lisa Gloster, vice-president Love Royer, secretary Nicole Franz, and treasurer Sharleen Kim. According to Monica Caballero, "It's fun, you'll meet other people and you know it's for a good cause."

Key Club worked with Kiwanis Club of Costa Mesa. Both are international clubs. The officers were president Amy Vocke, vice-president Nora Preece, secretary Elizabeth Wells, and treasurer Stacy Bekemeyer. They visited Hoag Hospital, gave a party for abused children, and went to CHOC. They went caroling, worked with children and elderly. Bekemeyer said, "You feel that you really help out your community. You also get a chance to help the less fortunate."

Art of Creativity

Is Edgar Allan Poe your idea of a good scare? Do you like having a moment to yourself writing an insightful poem? If your answer was an enthusiastic "yes" for either question, you are a perfect candidate for becoming a member of the Creative Writing Club.

"Creative Writing Club is a great place to read your short stories and poems," continued Mark Korando. "You get constructive criticisms".

Being in the Creative Writing Club was like having a family of writers to help you whenever you needed it. Anyone who liked to write or needed helpful hints on their creative writing could stop by and get help.

But the Creative Writing Club was not the only place where you could get some helping hands. If you have ever walked into your English class, noticing at the last moment that you forgot your Scarlet Letter, you will greatly benefit from the club, the Student Store. This establishment supplied the students with any necessary materials. The membership was completely voluntary, and the members often spent their lunch or break serving the school.

Serving O.C.

Three of our most active service organizations were Care Kids, Mecha, and Just Say No! A new club, the Asian Club, was also started in the fall.

Care Kids was a group of Estancia students dedicated to enlightening children about the effects of drugs and alcohol. They reached out to younger students through special sessions.

Mecha Club's primary goals were to make the Hispanic students aware of their heritage and to serve the community. They encouraged Hispanic students to remain in school and to build confidence in themselves.

Just Say No! worked at bettering the condition of tomorrow's teens. The members of this club went to a local elementary school. "We are working with younger people to catch them before they have a chance to start with any bad habits," said club member Kris Choi.

The Asian Club, new to Estancia, was very active. It was formed to promote awareness of the Asian culture. The food tasting put on by the club was a very successful event with lots of customers.

Flash On People

The differences in people's personalities is what brings them together. The old cliche "opposites attract" is apparent when you walk through the halls at Estancia. The quiet people are with the louder, more outspoken people. There is a real sense of unity among the classes. At pep assemblies, the juniors and seniors come together to get the freshmen, and the seniors organize themselves to beat the juniors in the spirit contest. People are what gives this campus the outstanding reputation and personality that it has.

Typical students, but not typical dress! These are some of the costumes worn by students on Halloween, as modeled by Lisa DeLong, Paul LeBaron, Monica Caballero, Kathy Nichols, and two masked friends.

Frosh:

"The freshman class is rad."

Rachel Brown

Even though freshmen were looked down upon by many upper classmen, they made it through the year with ease.

They had difficult times, such as being called a "scrub", or just getting used to the different surroundings.

But there were also good times, laughs, reunions of old friends, and memories from the last few years. New friends came into the picture as well.

The year opened with new subjects and exciting obstacles that needed to be overcome, and overcome they were. Being able to fit in with the others was perhaps one of the biggest obstacles many had to face.

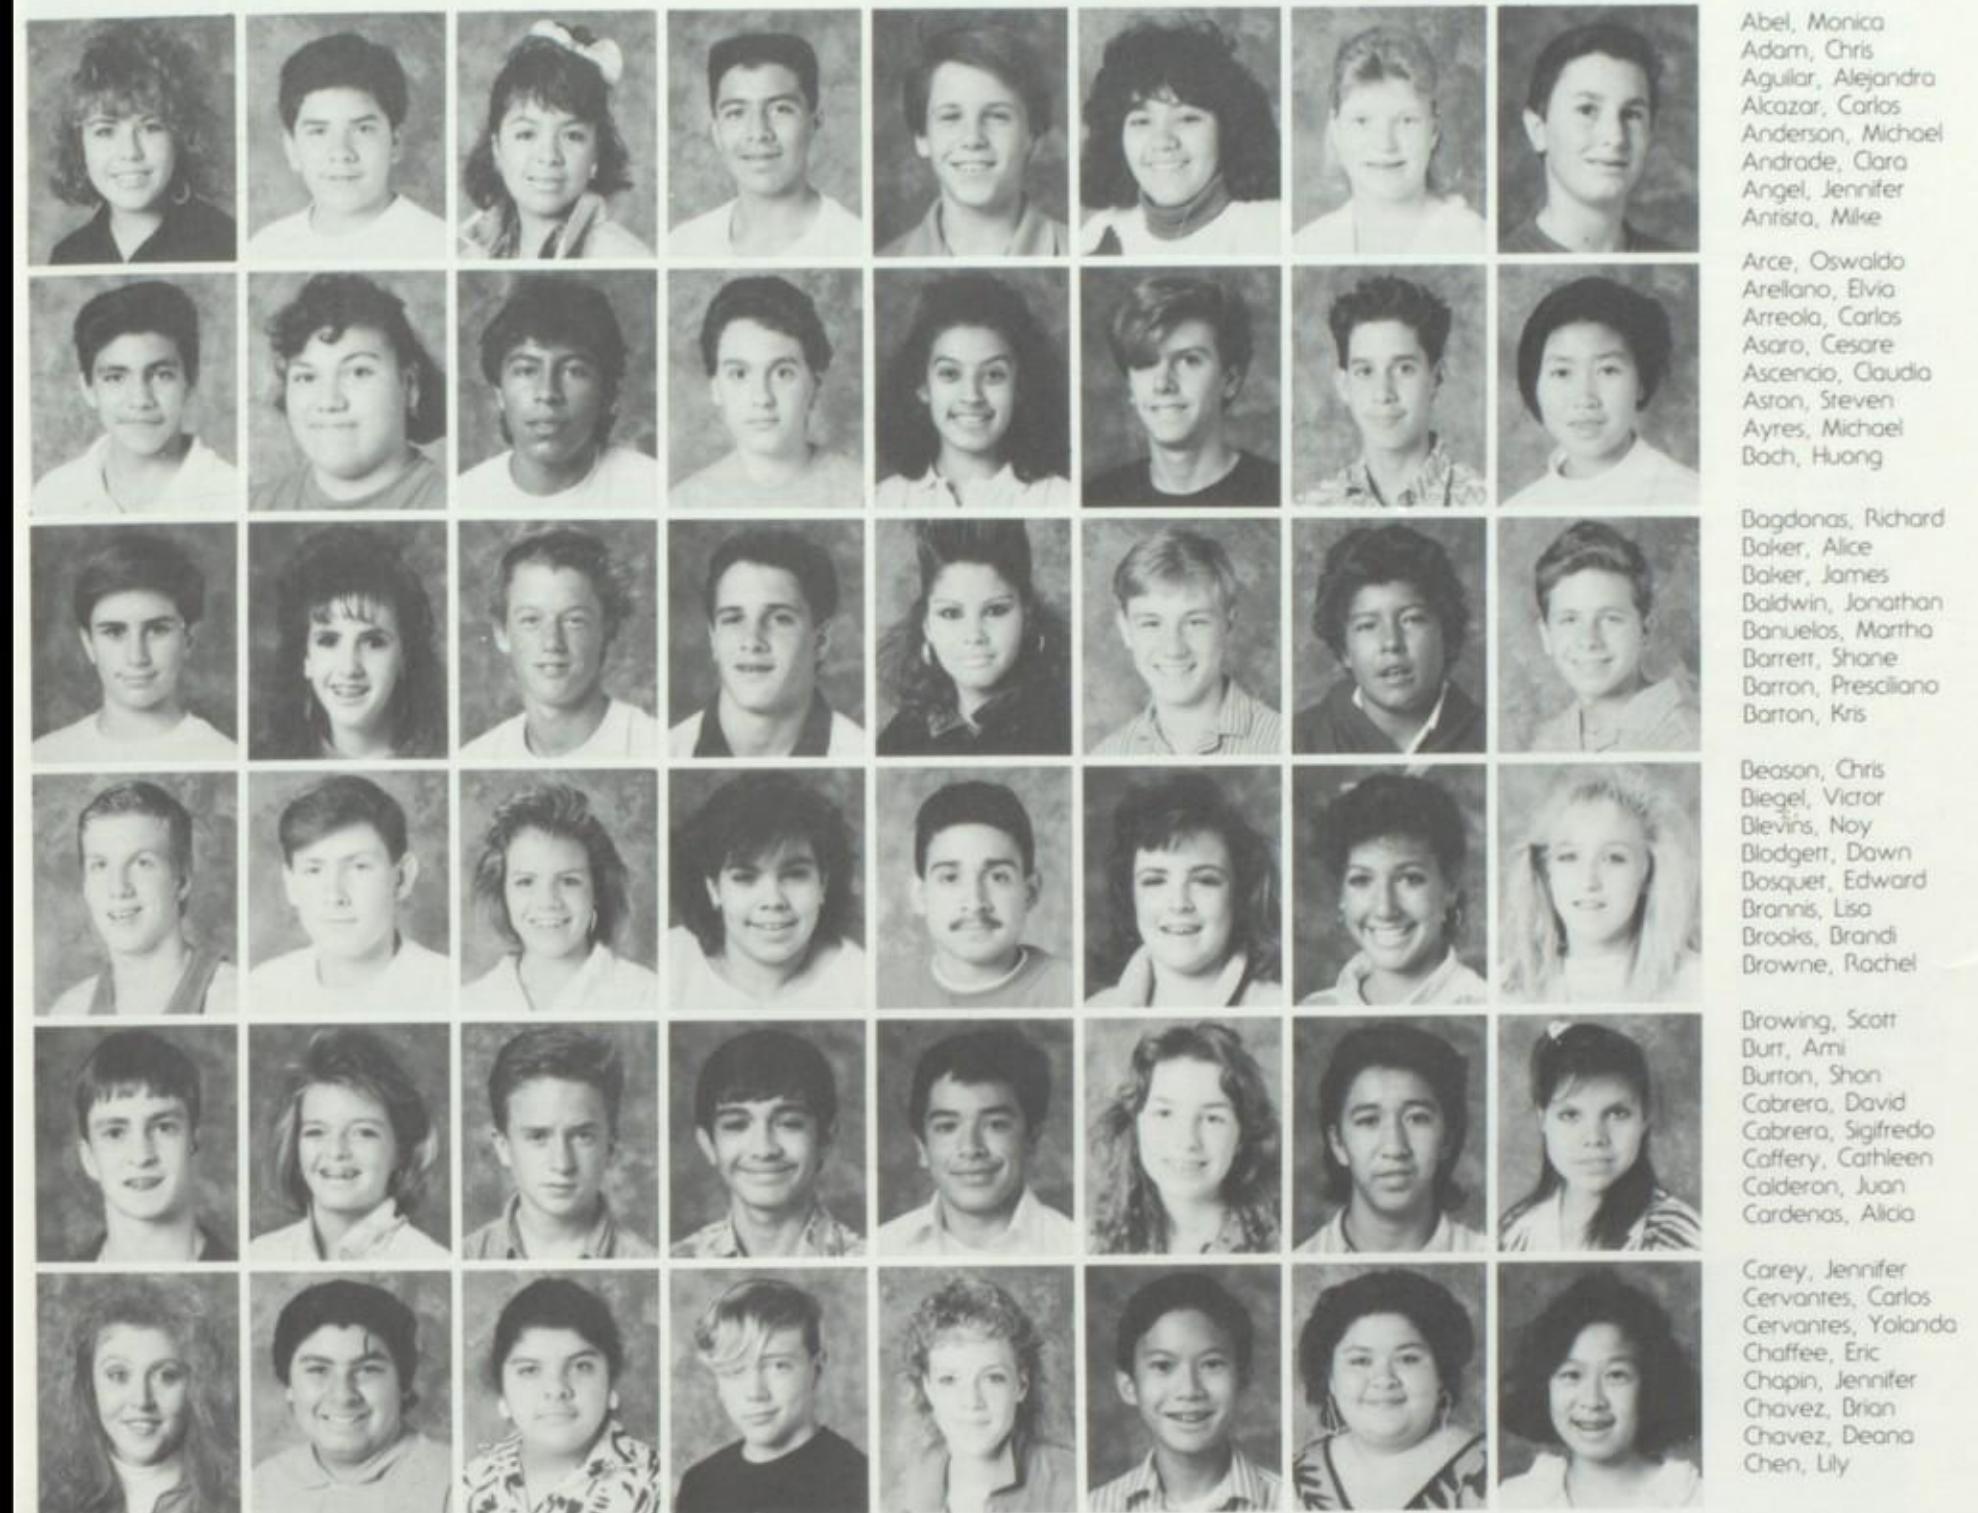

The freshman class had a good year and one that would certainly be remembered by many.

Where do freshmen hang out? This year's freshmen seemed to have their own individual hang-outs.

Mari Owada said "It seems that most the freshmen hang out around their lockers during break and lunch to socialize with their friends".

Brandi Brooks said, "Of course around their lockers, but for a few the commons was the place to socialize with friends".

Stefanie Lockwood commented, "Well, my friends are in precision dance, so we hang out in the band pit. And I guess the other freshmen hang out around their lockers. Paul McDaniel said, "My friends and I hang out around the commons during break and lunch."

This year's freshman class president, Brandon Johnson started his class off right. Jumping right into his presidency, Johnson became involved with his class. He started many fund raisers such as the freshman car wash and the "car bash" (which was used as a stress reliever). For Johnson, the year's main goals were: "To have fun and to get everyone involved with the school." The involvement of each individual was encouraged.

"It shouldn't be the "in" crowd. That's not right", said the president.

Of course, the fear of being victims of the "senior rights" was predominant for most freshmen, but they all learned to fight the pressure from the upperclassmen with a class spirit, that was one of kind.

To sum up what high school was like for the freshmen, in the words of Johnson, "at the beginning it was really different from what we had before, but now it's a regular school!"

Do freshmen have a social life? Yes, even though they can't drive, they still manage to get around. Allison Garrett said, "Well, some of the things I do are, go shopping at the mall and go to the movies."

Erin Driskell said, "I try to get out as often as possible. When I go places I usually go to the mall, and at home I just watch TV."

Jason Clark said, "I go to the movies on the weekends and ride my skateboard."

Kristen Hall said, "Sometimes I go to the movies or miniature golf with my friends."

For many freshmen Estanica seemed foreign and unfamiliar. It was hard for them to understand what they could and could not do. But a few found it easy to get involved. How did these freshmen find out about activities and know how to get involved with them?

"Well, I just followed my friends who knew more about the school, and I'm glad that I got involved, especially the precision dance!", explained Mary Owada

There were, also, many who participated in different sports. Getting started early in their high school year gave them chances to train in depth and to familiarize themselves with their sports.

"I was on the softball team this year, and I'm really glad that I got started in my freshman year", stated Brandi Brooks.

"The sophomores dominate!"

Rachel Wells

The sophomore class became more organized and more involved in school activities than in their freshmen year. More class meetings were held and the people united to participate in extracurricular events. Examples of these events were a beach party held in the summer and later, a picnic at Tanger Park.

Sophomores also succeeded in raising a large amount of money. The money mostly came from running the Homecoming Dance. The sophomores look forward to using their earnings in their senior year. If they earn enough money, the sophomores will not have to pay for all the events that take place during their senior year, such as prom.

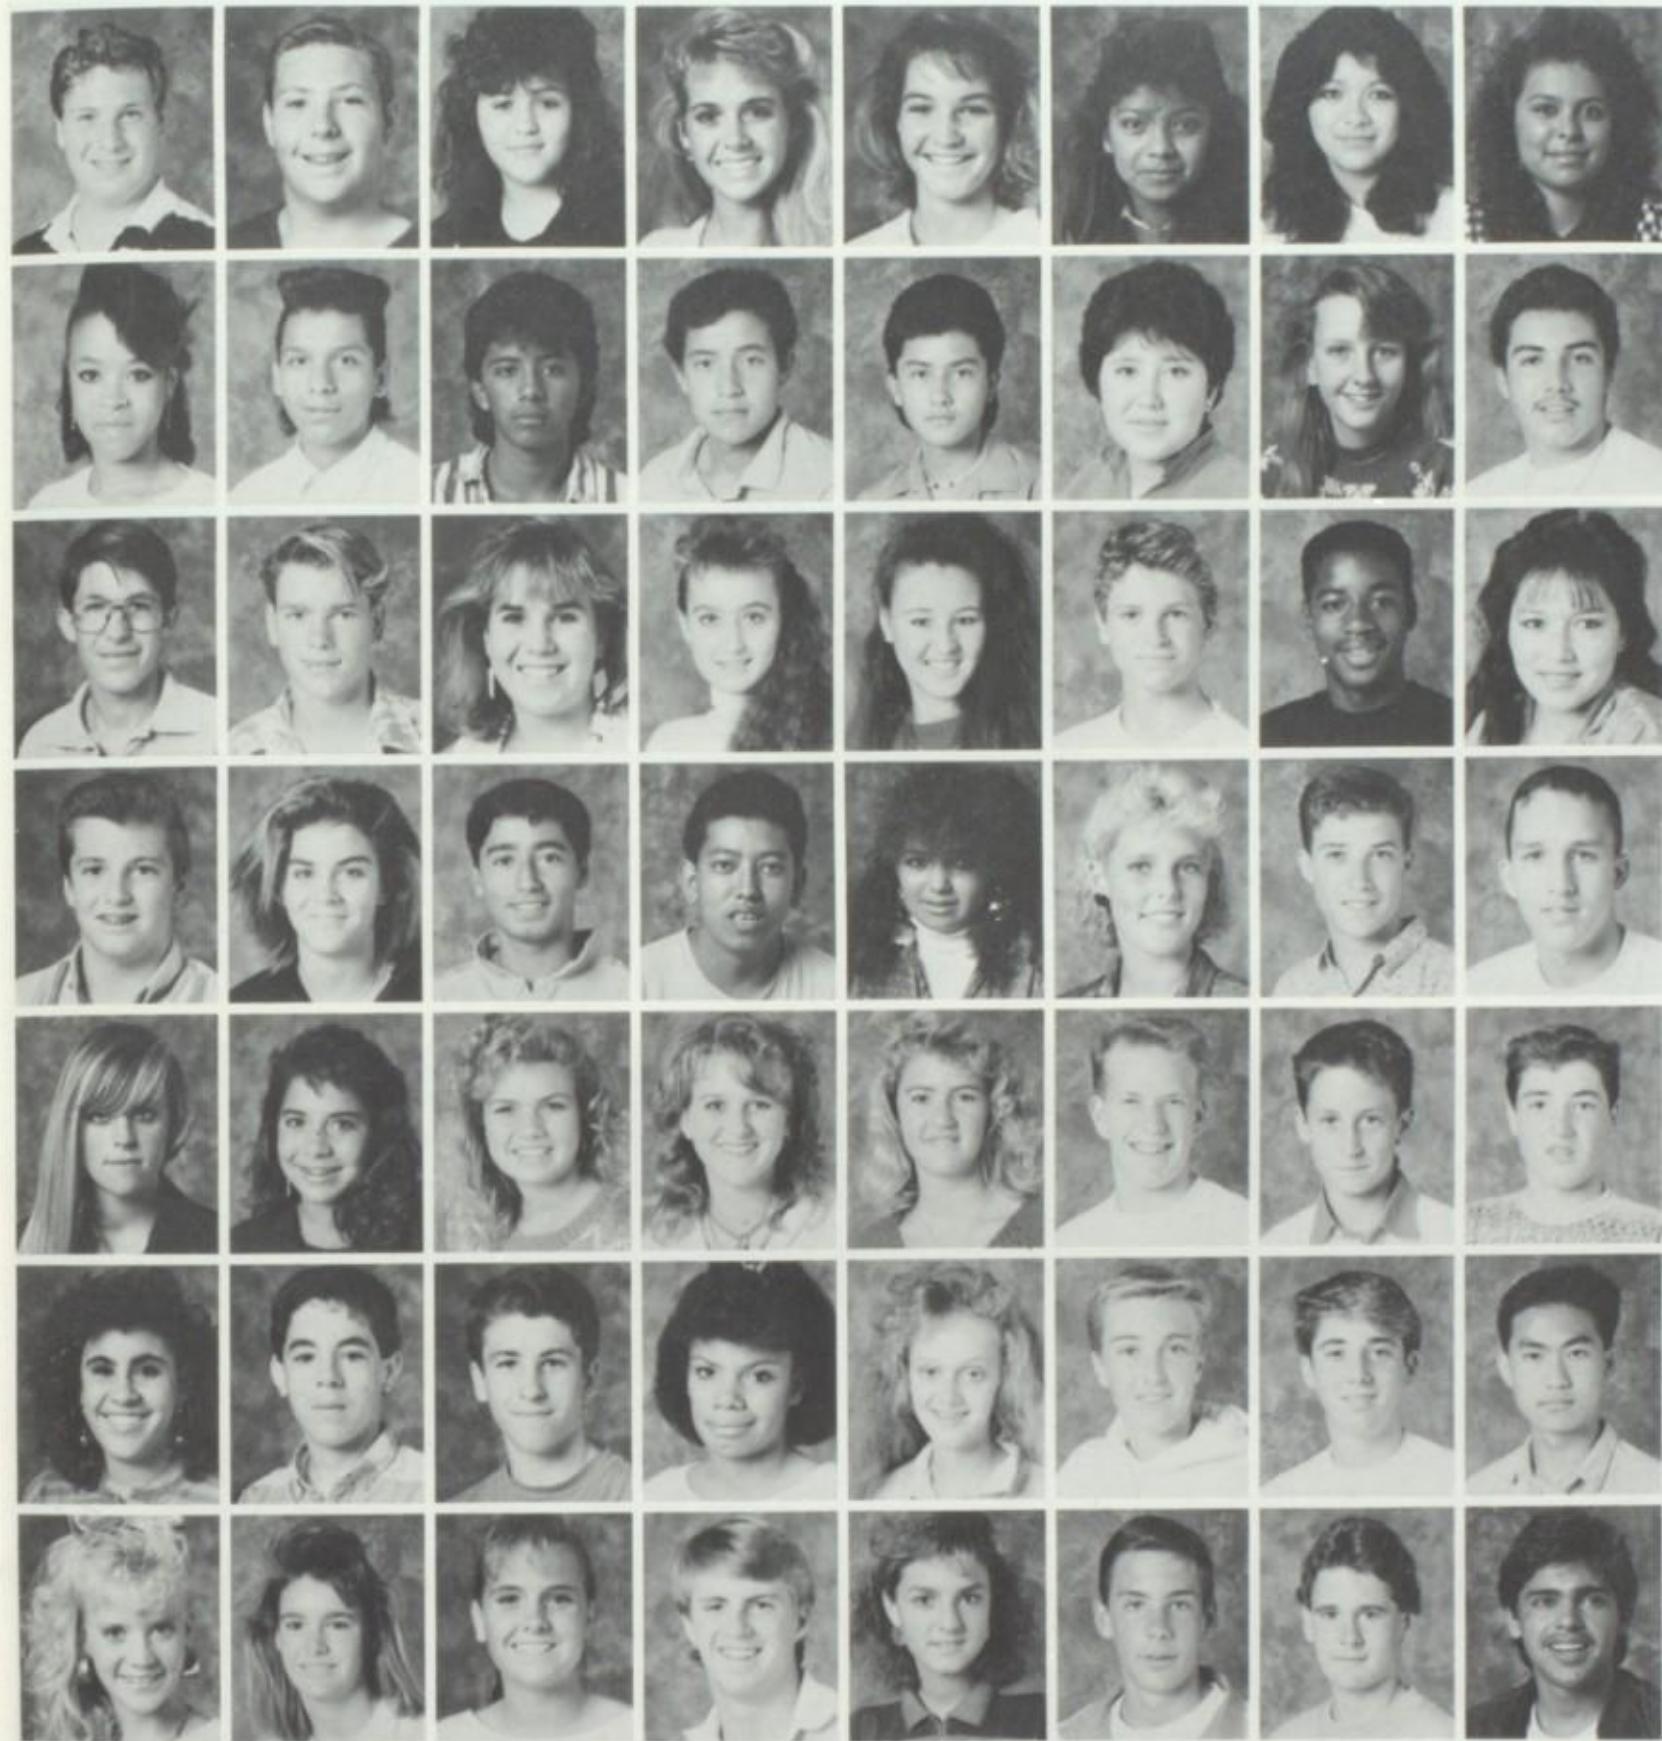

All in all, it was a prosperous year.

Sophomores show off their spirit to the other classes during a pep rally.

Kim Noh represents the enthusiastic sophomores.

Isaac Justice entertains himself by watching a soccer practice.

The sophomore class displayed their school spirit in a variety of ways. In one of the pep assemblies, some sophomores decorated tee-shirts that spelled "Class of 90" and "Sophomores" in red and gold lettering. They also made megaphones, banners, and confetti. At the football games, many sophomores dressed in school colors and waved red and gold pom-poms. Some cheers heard during those games were inspired by the sophomores and they participated in all of the cheers. Numerous sophomores attended the school dances this year and some really enjoyed them.

Kirsten Spain commented that "the dances are a place just to get rowdy and have fun with friends."

Spirited sophomores, Mistie Gray and Gina Duran get ready to support the boys' sophomore basketball team.

"Driving is a fundamental for life and some have a long wait but it's well worth it."

Liz Linn

Some sophomores were lucky enough to drive their own car, but most had to rely on mom's or dad's vehicle to get around. A few sophomores missed the date that allowed them to take the required course. Since they had to be a certain age to take it, they had to wait until summer or their junior year to legally get behind the wheel of any car.

Liz Collins said, "I'm kind of bummed because I won't be able to drive until I'm kind of bummed because I won't be able to drive until I'm a junior, but I'll still have fun driving with my friends and using their gas money instead of mine."

The simulator was a first time driving experience for several sophomores. Students practiced their skills and then took a test. This caused anxiety and frustration for many sophomores. Ann Walker totally forgot to make her pre-driving checks because she was so nervous on the road.

"Killer salad bar!" That's what Shannon Hale had to say about her favorite restaurant, the Sizzler. Out of the many restaurants and fast-food joints, how does someone choose where to eat? Some sophomores knew exactly what their favorite place to eat was. Stacy Aiello preferred The Spaghetti Factory. "I like it because it has killer guys and good food, mostly the guys!"

Chris Coons claimed that he liked Pizza d'Oro. "It has huge pizzas."

Flakey Jake's was Kim Moore's number one choice. "The fries with cheese are tasty."

Although there were some students with definite ideas of their favorite restaurant, not everyone was so sure. For them, the search goes on.

"Break gives me a chance to relax my brain."
Danielle Cherpesci

What did sophomore students do during break between second and third period? For food, they had their choice between the vending machines, the a la carte line, and snacks from home. Sophomores were often found begging for change from friends to use in the machines.

Not everyone viewed break as just an eating time, however. "For me, break was a relief from work in classes when I could talk with friends", said Eloise Brown. Some sophomores used break to finish homework and study for upcoming tests.

All looked forward to and enjoyed break each day.

"Junior Parties are Better!"
Lance Ely

Neil King not yet awake for school.

Ashley Brown and Mike McNeff prepare to do an exciting lab in chemistry class.

Being a junior definitely had its advantages. Despite the increased difficulty of their classes, juniors were blessed with several privileges and advantages.

Juniors were upperclassmen without the hassles and worries of being a senior. Almost all could drive and leave the campus at lunch. And for the students with stricter parents, the advent of their sixteenth birthday meant they could finally date.

There was also an advantage to the increased demands on a junior. Rod Planchon said, "I feel as juniors we are much more aware of our surroundings which help us to be more mature." There was a sort of comradeship among juniors that had not been there before.

For those who believed that there was nothing special about their junior year, take into consideration what Lance Ely had to say, "The parties are better!"

Jeh Hildebrand and Todd Garber have walked to school so often they can even do it in sync.

By their junior year, most students had finally gotten their driver's license. And with the license, if the financial support was there, came the car. Most students who had cars enjoyed the privilege of driving because it freed them from having to depend on someone else to give them a ride, or walking.

The parking lot was full of these cars, and at three o'clock the cars came pouring out. Some people thought that the different cars showed the school's character and diversity. But others, such as Philip Mansfield thought there were just, "too many".

"Watch out!" says Stacie Lucia as she whizzes by in her Volkswagen Bug.

A student could only get an off-campus permit for lunch time, if they were a junior or senior. Juniors relished this privilege of being upper-classmen. But where did most of the students go, in the short forty minute lunch break?

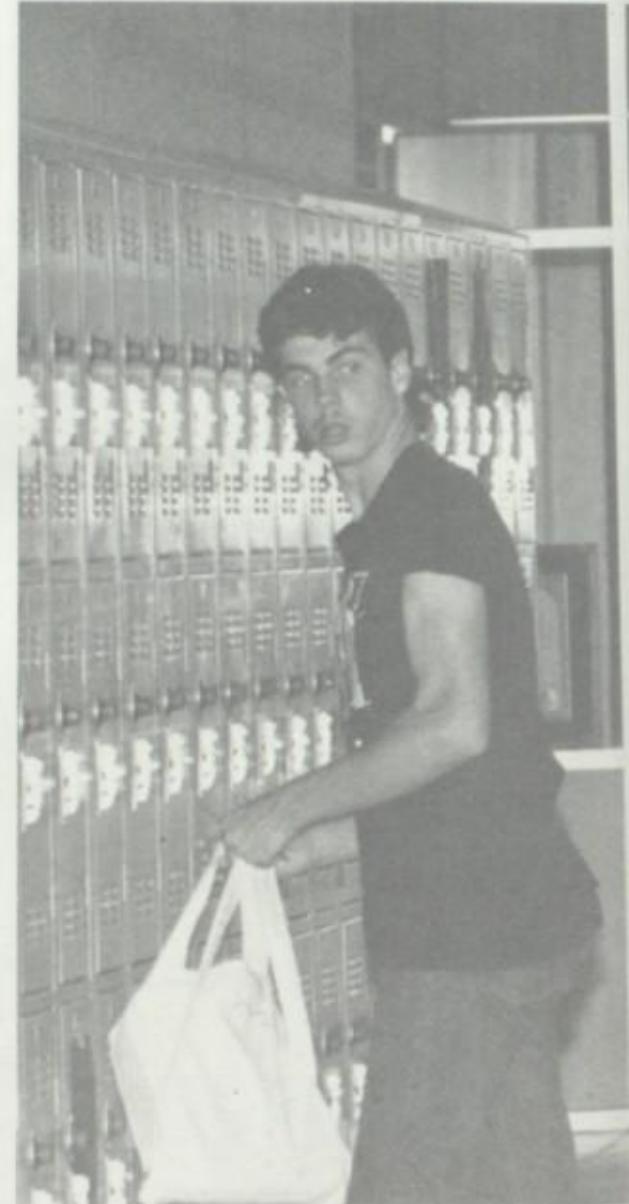

Fast food restaurants (if you can call them restaurants) took the lead for the most frequented stop. Included in these were MacDonald's, Burger King, Del Taco, and Chili's.

Also, a friend's house was a nice place to go to relax for a few minutes before returning to the monotonous daily routine. While there, a person could get caught up with all the latest on the noon-hour soap operas.

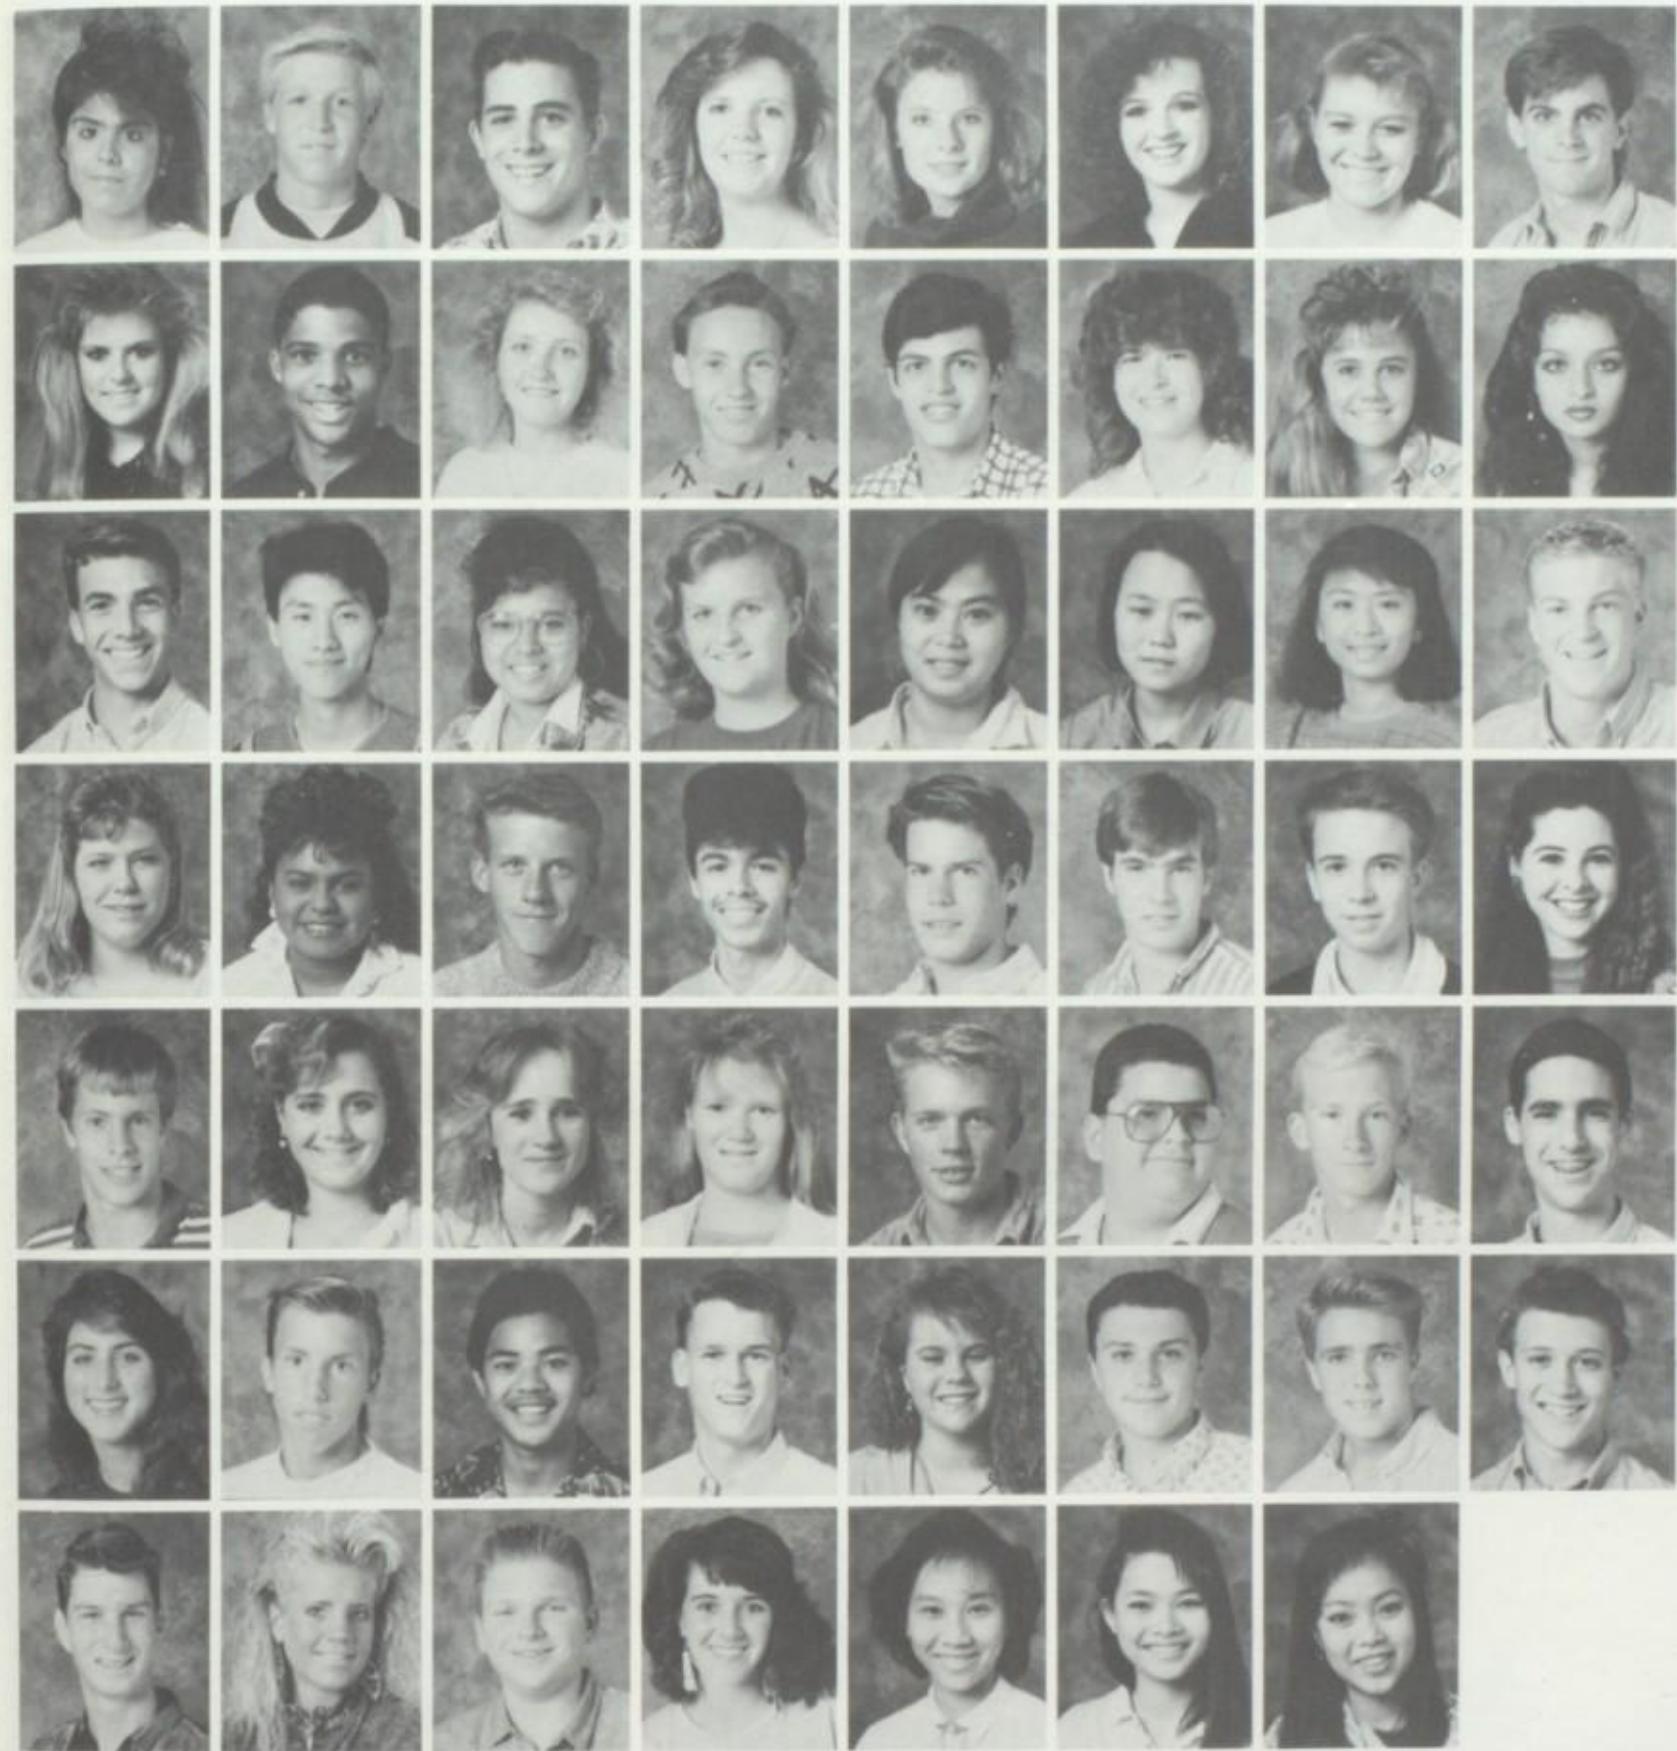

Of course, there was the difficulty in getting back to school on time for fifth period, so some people were forced to give up their daily lunch excursions. But no matter where they spent their lunch, it was a needed break for juniors to recuperate, and get ready for afternoon classes.

Over already? Deana Graham returns reluctantly to school.

Late Again? Kevin Moore realizes the late bell has already rung.

You may wonder, why the Spanish club would even consider taking part in a Hunger Walk. But there was a very good reason for it; most of the money raised would go to Spanish speaking countries.

Concern was the organization which sponsored the event, and anyone who wanted to come was welcome. They were especially grateful, though, to have the Spanish club come as a group.

Some of the people who went with Spanish club to walk were Martin Dahl, the club's President, Michael Kutzik, its vice president, and Nicole Balding, all juniors. Not surprisingly, this group of juniors made up half of those attending from our school. Truly, the junior class was the more spirited and supportive than any other. '89 RULES!

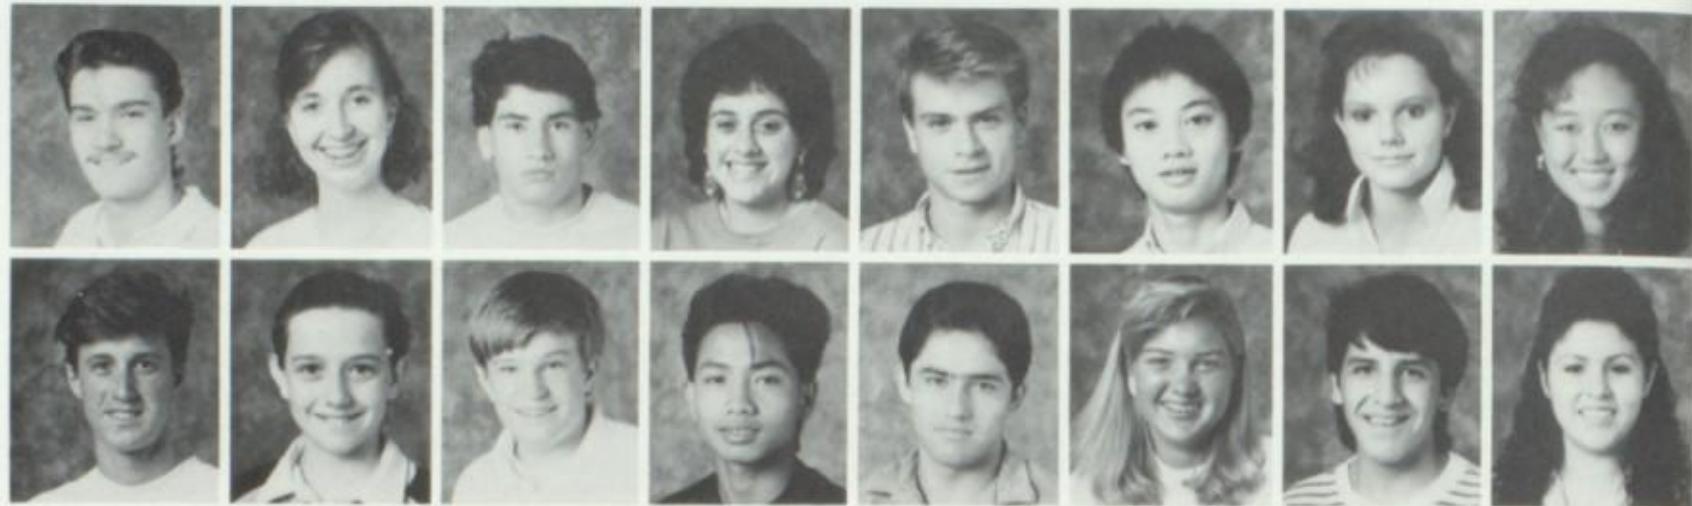

On your mark, get set, GO! Hunger Walkers begin their 3-hour journey.

After having completed 11 years, and now being in their 12th year of school, (remember kindergarten), juniors should have heard about every excuse there is.

Well almost. Excuses ranged from the usual, "I left it at home," to "I had to walk to school in the rain, my folder dropped and all the papers got ruined". There was also, "I went skiing on vacation and I left it in the cabin", "I put it in my other folder," and "I did the wrong page." Or as Anne LaFave said, "You didn't tell us that!"

But there was one extremely unique excuse by Susan "My sister got mad at me and tore up all my maps; so I couldn't turn the assignment in." Why didn't her parents write her a note? "They're on vacation in Europe; and my housekeeper refused to write one." Uh Huh! Of course Susan was not a student at our school. Estancia students usually do their homework.

Dusan Vukadinov smiles as he realizes he has just gotten away with one of the oldest tricks in the book.

For years, Youth Ambassadors of America have been trying to lessen the strained relations between the United States and Russia by using the leaders of the future: children.

This organization sponsored a Youth Summit Between Russian and American children in the spring of 1988. They chose two high school students from each state except California, from which they took four. One of the four chosen was Arielle Lawson.

The Youth Ambassador organization screened many applicants, so as to pick those they thought to be most suitable for this important task, and Lawson was one of the select few.

Lawson said she applied because she was concerned about the problems between the two countries and the possibility of nuclear war. By going, she hoped to make more people aware of the importance of world peace and perhaps bring new hope to that cause.

The students from America were met by their Russian counterparts and travelled to Helsinki, for a two-day briefing on protocol. Then they traveled to Moscow, Leningrad, and two smaller cities in the country. Along the way, they stopped to visit several schools and hospitals, and met with a few Russian delegates.

During the visit, the students talked about possibilities for creating world peace. Lawson pointed out that, "people think it isn't possible or realistic, but you have to work at something to make it happen."

Hopefully Arielle Lawson's trip to Russia will help bring the two countries to a better understanding of each other.

"Teaching is the most important career that you can pursue, because the kids are the most important part in society."

Mr. Palmer

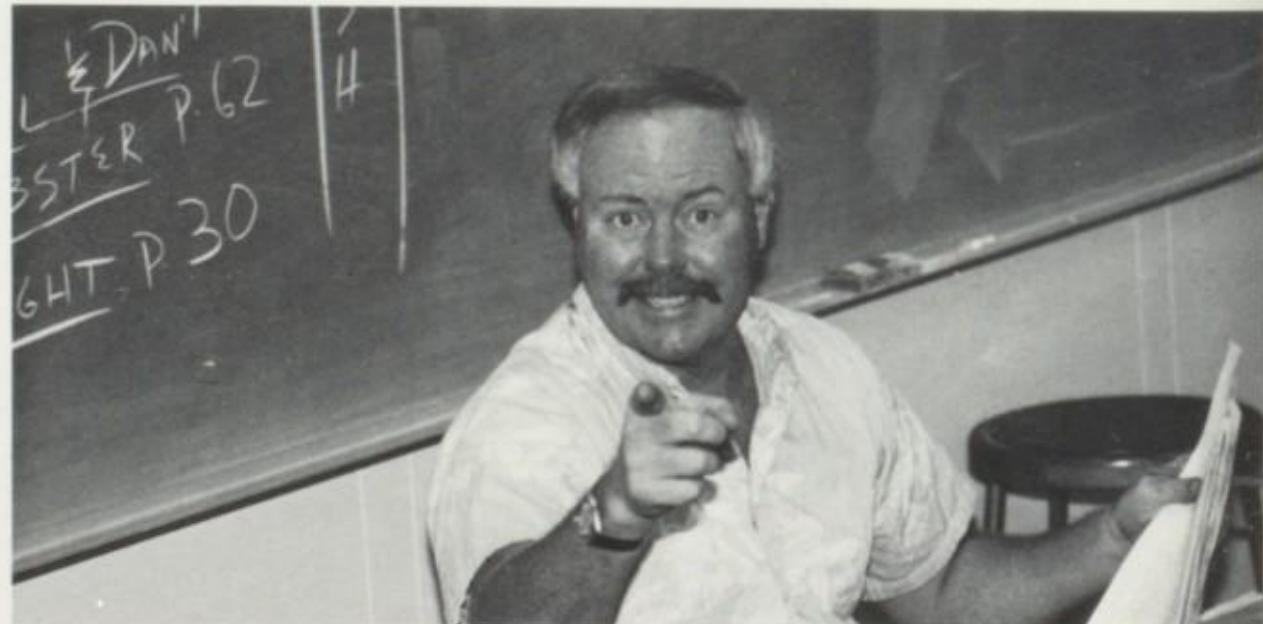

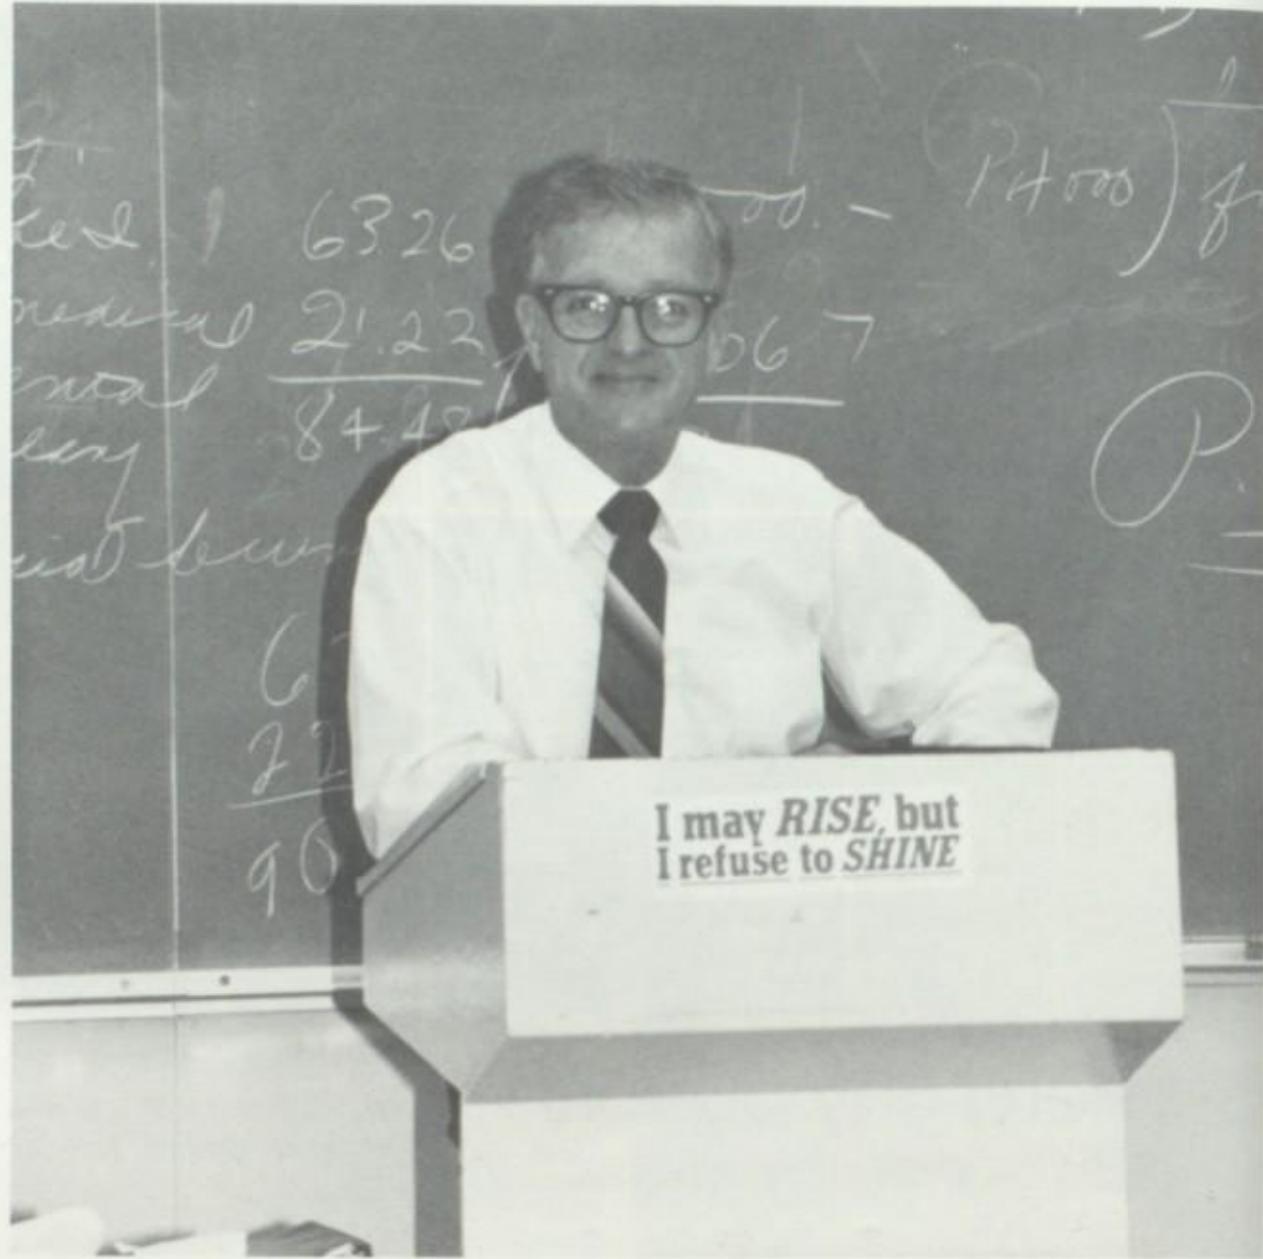

Teachers are an extra special group of people. Although most do not realize it, teachers do more work than all of the students put together. Even though we see them everyday as teachers who make us learn, the important part is that they are not only our teachers but, they are our friends too.

While recovering from surgery, Mr. Granite shows his school spirit at the football game.

"Good morning class," said Mr. Palmer eagerly greeting his students.

"Do you get the point?" asked Mr. Sunderman in his freshman English class.

At the football game Mr. Wolf, band director, stands up with his son Adam, "our miniature band director".

Faculty:

"I try to take the kids from where they are to where I want them to be."
Mr. Higgins

Do you ever just sit in class and wonder Why am I here, I'm so bored? That's the worst thing that could happen to a student in a class. It's kind of like the teacher "Noid". It's just what the teachers don't want. They want you to express your thoughts and to get involved, but for the student it's hard to do when you are so bored.

Student boredom was what teachers like Mrs. Fenstermaker, one of our Spanish teachers, tried to avoid with her decorative room with a comfortable atmosphere and her creative ideas. Or Mr. Higgins with his exciting noises and cheerful dancing. Or Mrs. Tipper with her stories of her son Geoffery and her creative myths of do's and don'ts in Math or even her incredible mind bending toys.

The Science court seemed to have their own unique techniques to fight boredom. Mr. Adams entertained with his tall tales and his wonderful toys. Then there was the unique humor of Mr. Wynkoop, whose continual humorous expressions amused the class. And one can't forget the classy but twisting songs of Mr. Cullen!

These and other teachers really care. They don't come to school to just get through the day; they come to teach.

Mr. Jenner is relieving tension after a hard day of teaching his freshman history classes.

"Sweet Eddy, the love machine!"

Mrs. Blanton

Meet three married couples that live and work together: Mr. and Mrs. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. Hurt, and Mr. and Mrs. Cullen. Mr. and Mrs. Blanton first met at a Long Beach State class, and as Mr. Blanton described it, "Our eyes met across the room and I knew." Mr. Blanton, (or Sweet Eddy as they say), was coaching football at Long Beach, so naturally their first date was to a football game. About a year later they were married. As Mrs. Blanton put it, "there was never a doubt in either of our minds. We both knew it was right."

Mr. and Mrs. Hurt's story is quite different. They met at Estancia. Mr. Hurt called her up for a date to the Laguna White House which started their love affair. But before they got married, they used to sneak around school, not wanting faculty to know of their romance. Mr. Hurt said, "She was very young and beautiful." Mrs. Hurt said, "He's cute, but he's very shy." They were married in 1978, very much in love, and still are.

Mr. and Mrs. Cullen met through Mrs. Cullen's daughter who at the time was in Mr. Cullen's class. They met on a back-to-school night and their first date was at a faculty party in Newport Beach. They went together off and on for two years and in 1980 they were married. Mrs. Cullen likes working together because she believes "we can contribute more to the school and activities." Mr. Cullen likes it because he gets to see his beautiful wife. "The first time I saw her I thought she was gorgeous."

"Sweet Eddy the love machine," shows us that he always has time for Mrs. Blanton.

With that beautiful smile we know why Mr. Cullen couldn't resist Mrs. Cullen.

Can you believe our own Mrs. Hurt had a secret romance with Mr. Hurt before they were married?

Love and school romance is shown beautifully by couples Mr. and Mrs. Hurt, Mr and Mrs. Cullen and Mr. and Mrs. Blanton.

Showing how chemistry can build your muscles Mr. Cullen gives us a flex.

What do teachers do in their spare time? Let's find out.

Mrs. Reilly, our first hobbyist, goes deep sea fishing for Marlin on a 25 ft boat. She also goes hunting for wild pheasant, dove, and quail. She believes, "It's fun being out in the open, I really like the sense of being outdoors."

Mr. Wolf, our band director, also has an interesting hobby. He flies Ultralight airplanes and said, "It gives me a free feeling; I'm kind of like a bird completely and absolutely free."

We also have a musician. Mr. Harvey, one of our English teachers, is an amateur clarinetist. His advice to you if you're interested in music is, "Music is a great life. If you like it go for it."

We also have two equestrians in the group: Mrs. Svendsen and Mr. Jenner. Mrs. Svendsen breeds beautiful Arabian horses. She said, "To see a new foal being born in the spring is a beautiful sight." Mr. Jenner, on the other hand, shows his marvelous Morgan horses. He said, "It's an essential part of my life. After I retire I hope to have a horse farm some where in Arizona."

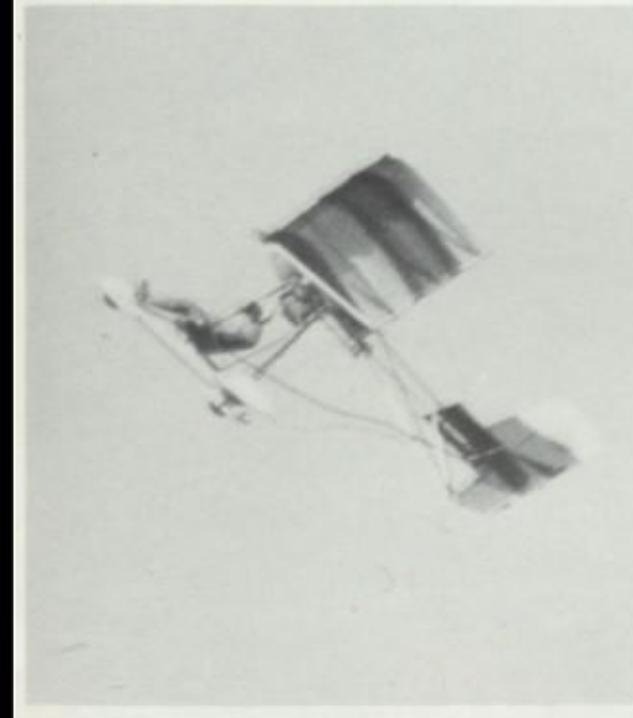

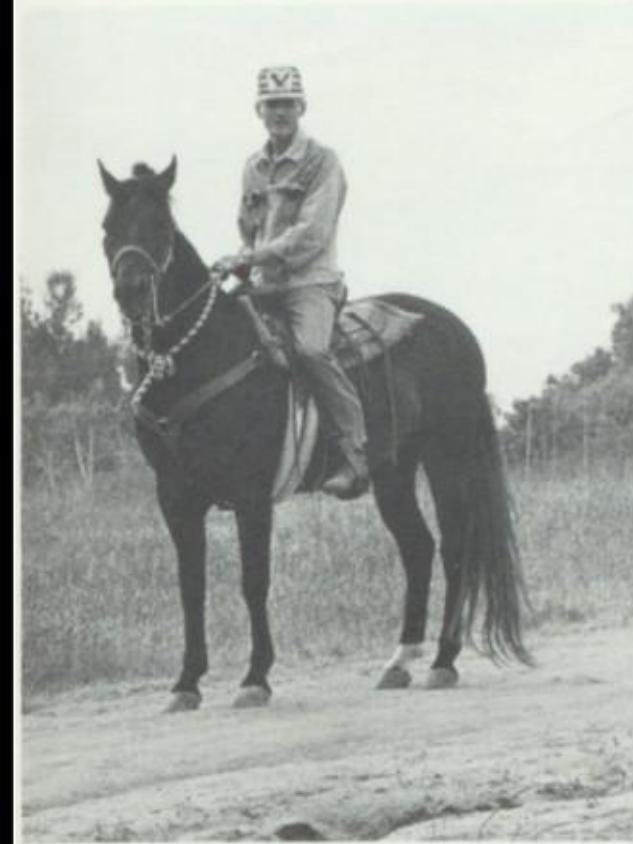

Maybe the most unusual hobby is practiced by Mr. Waters. He owns a Greyhound bus which he converted into a mobile home. He likes driving it because "It's big and I can run every bad driver off the road, but also because I can feel the power in it. It wants to go fast!"

"The thrill of being in the air is really like being completely free."
Mr. Wolf

Mr. Waters shows us his proud "new father" look in front of his converted Greyhound bus.

Mrs. Svendsen with the Arabian mare MiSabi and her one day old filly My Khemmona.

While watching an Estrandia track meet, Mr. Jenner shows the style and beauty of his Morgan horse.

Watch out for "Dare Devil Wolf!" Here he comes!

Showing off her 200lb Marlin, Mrs. Reilly poses for a quick picture.

Faculty:

"To roll your windows down and go cruising on the highway is so American," Mr. Robitaille.

Have you ever taken a walk out to the faculty parking lot and taken a good look around? Some of the richest looking cars can be found there, such as Mr. Sunderman's hot looking Porsche 911 T, which he modestly admits is a fun car.

Then there is Mr. Robitaille who drives a Camaro. Does the car make girls look at him? His reply was, "Why, they're not looking at the car!"

Who can forget the pair of Mercedes owned by one of Estancia's married couples, the Hurts. It's easy to tell theirs from others with their license plates "IM HURT" and "HURT TOO."

But if we mention one Mercedes we've got to mention the other one owned by Mrs. Reilly, one of our French teachers. She said "J'aime ma voiture!" (I love my car).

Yet we can't forget the awesome Ferrari owned by Mr. Warren. He said, "It's a ball. You can cruise at a high speed and virtually feel the power!"

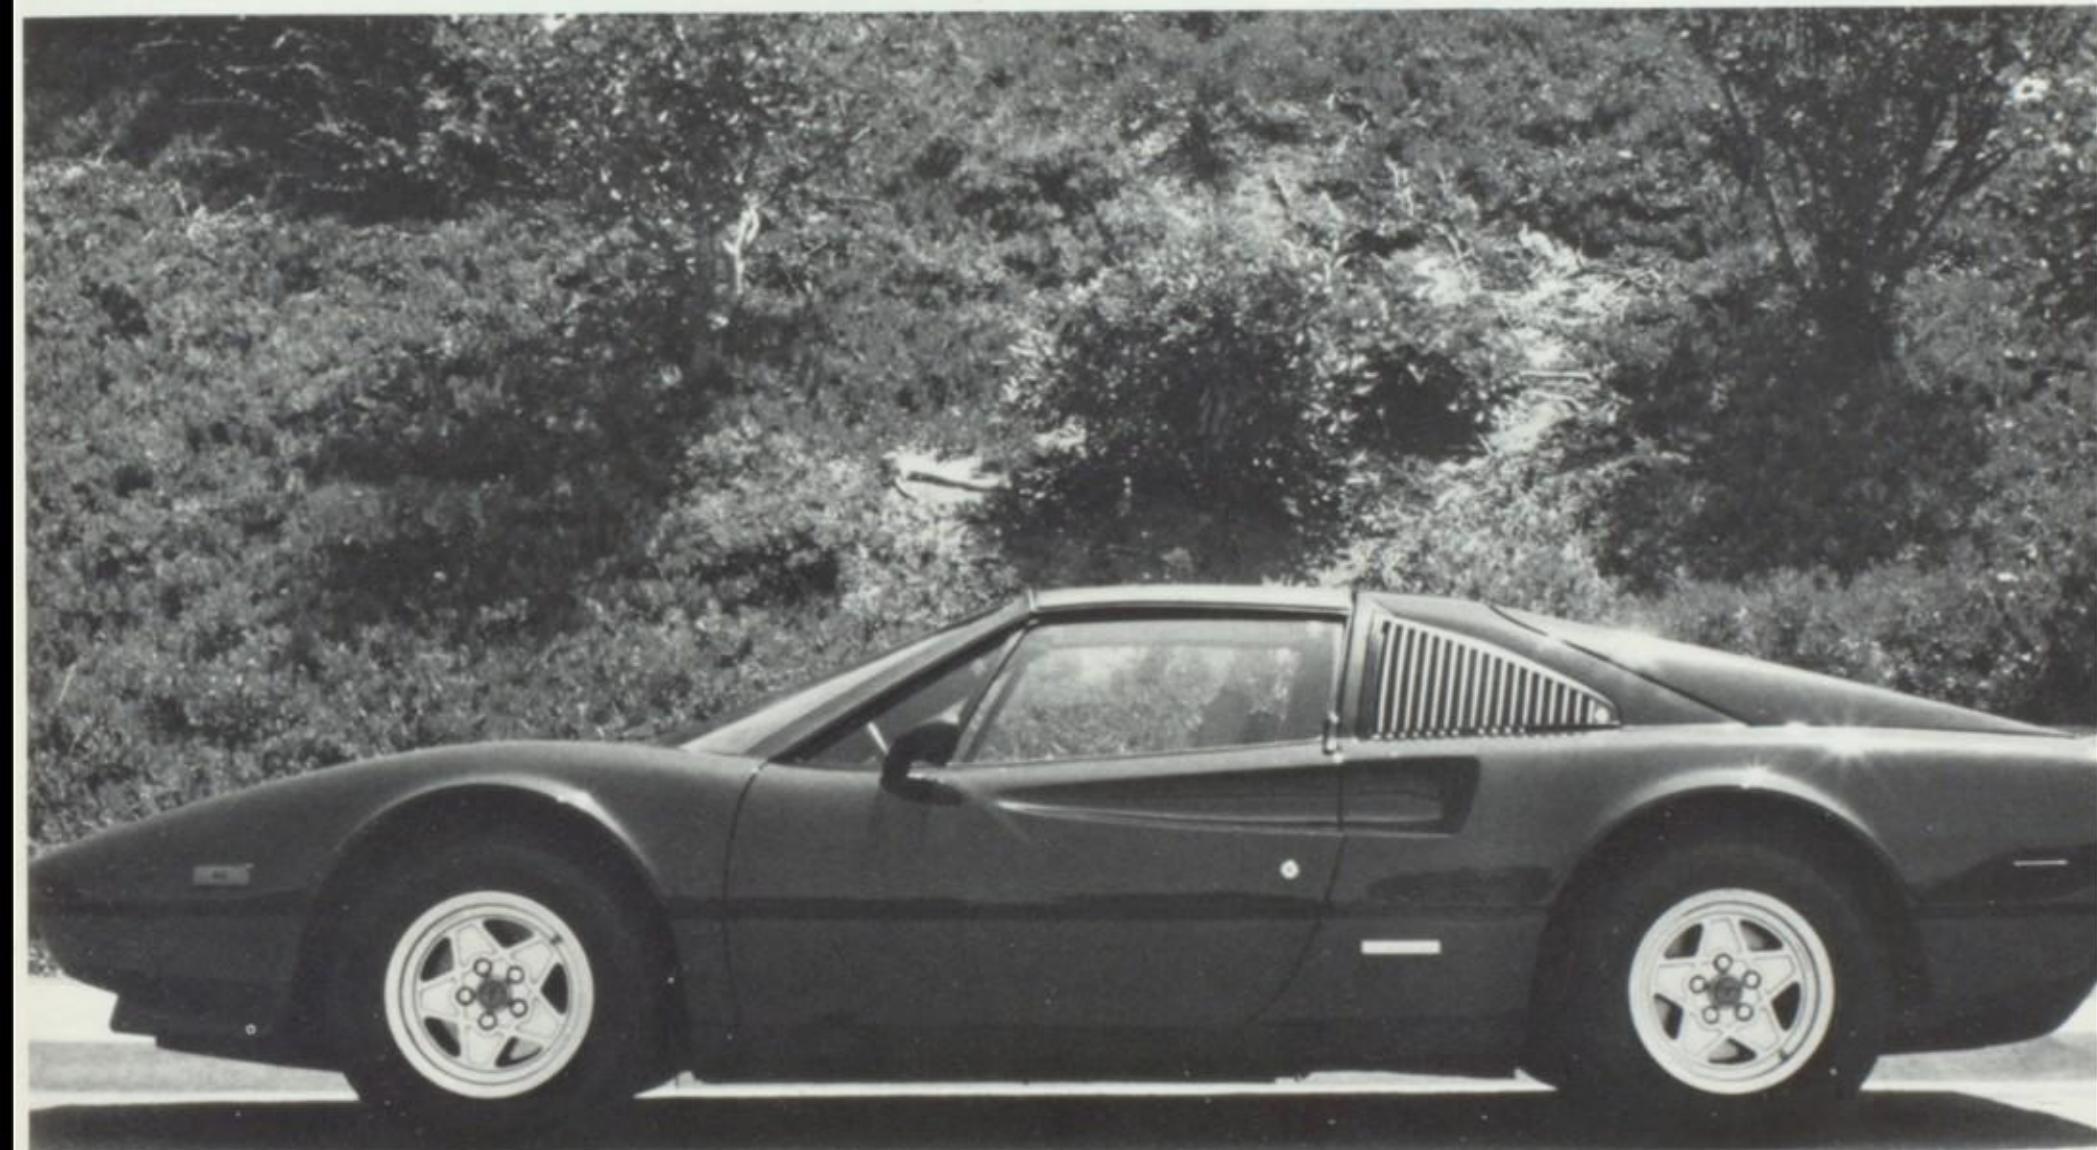

Mrs. Hurt's "Baby"; but where's the other half? No need to look very far.

Now whose car could this be?

Now how could this car be hurting?
Mr. Hurt takes great care of it.

Now that's what I call a real car! Mr. Warren is a lucky man.

Faculty:

"I enjoy working with young people."

Mrs. Svendsen.

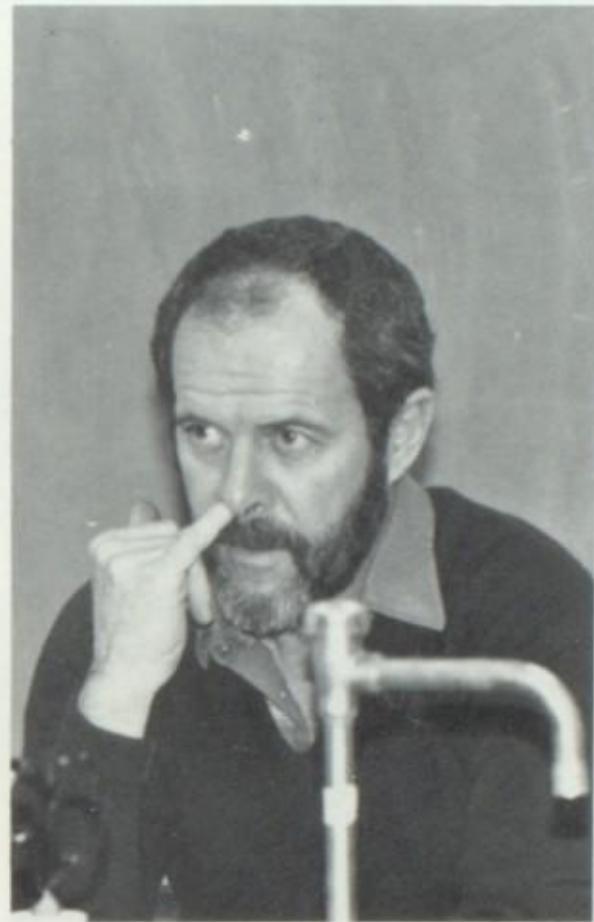

Showing us how much she loves teaching,
Mrs. Ross gives us a smile.

You know Mr. Pestolesi is a proud father when he starts showing his baby pictures!

Shanon Fernald: My time at Estancia will always be remembered. The joys and sorrows of one's high school life should be cherished. For whether we loved or hated the experience we did at least experience it. At no time in any of our lives will we be high school students again, for though we entered as children, we leave now as adults. A small fragment of Estancia with each graduating student in each of their hearts will be embedded the students, faculty, and spirit comprising this great institution. And as this graduating class bids farewell, I bid farewell. God Bless You All.

Sheila Fineberg: EHS thanx! Erika and Lorianne-best friends. Erika sexy girlfriend, boyfriend troubles? Lulu pinupower and our VI love ya! ## Flash On Sports

All sports call, basically, for the same thing: dedication. Dedication to hours of grueling practice, dedication to the team, dedication to discipline. Athletes who are dedicated and disciplined, excel in their sport. Athletes do this for the roar of the crowds, for that flash instant when they are heroes.

An Eagle hand-off, hoping to gain yards for a first down.

Expectations For Success And Jumping To New Heights

Teamwork was the key that opened the door to victory for girls' volleyball. "When we play together, we can beat teams like these!", exclaimed coach Tom Pestolesi, following a winning game against Newport Harbor High School. Coach Pestolesi, experienced coach and volleyball player, taught the team much about teamwork and playing with emotion.

Volleyball was led by not one or two players, but by several members of the team. Senior, Kellie Kane, has set for Estancia for four years and was an undeniable asset to the team. Another four year letterman, Stacy Bekemeyer, used her height and strength to the Eagles' advantage and was a constant threat for opponents as middle blocker. "It's the best hit in volleyball!", was often heard from coach Pestolesi after the spikes of both Karen Schlessinger and Jeana Weber.

Coach Pestolesi was very proud of how all the members of the team played and is hoping for another good season next year. With the aggressive playing of junior Susan Baker, sophomores Marie Midland and Carrie Schafhauser, and freshman Brandi Brooks the chances are very good.

I Was So Excited I Asked Questions About Life

"Well, I suppose the most memorable event during our season was the Freshman Initiation," said Jeh Hildebrand with a huge grin on his face. "Of course, there was no physical harm what-so-ever. It just kind of enhanced the team spirit."

The team bond was stronger than ever, and the Eagle spirit soared. However, for the boys' cross-country team, the competition was no laughing matter. Because of lack of runners, in both the J.V. and Varsity teams, they suffered greatly. This was later reflected in their scores. But the runners never gave up their pursuit of victory. They worked daily on their speed. Even the dreaded "puke-hill" training was accepted with enthusiasm.

During practice, Kevin Keith, Jon Bube, and John Beth take easy laps around the school.

"When I first started, I was so excited and scared at the same time. I liked it, though," recollected Scott Freeman, a newcomer to the team. "I was standing on the starting line, asking questions about life to myself."

The team members followed the spirit of one for all and all for one. The goal was to run and build up endurance.

The cause of the collapse in the team was the lack of pre-season training. With only four weeks of practice over the summer, the team found it difficult to adjust to the competition of the Sea View League.

It's Not Just A Team But A Family

"We have lots of good potential and a great attitude," remarked Stephany Urea with enthusiasm. "But for most of us school work is important, too."

During this season, the girls' cross-country team's dedication and their passion for the sport inspired them to always do their best. The name of the game was to grow both mentally and physically. So it turned out that their training was not only for the purpose of muscle building but also for the development of one's attitude. Through intensive training, they learned to work as a team, but never lost their individual characteristics.

Their ability to learn the art of patience was uncovered through some of the events during the year. "The most amazing thing happened during the Costa Mesa Invitational," said Cindy Pearson with a weary smile. "The temperature was 101 degrees Fahrenheit, and everyone just kind of passed out, but a lot of us kept going."

The team's strongest point was togetherness. In fact, Julie Steward, one of the teams main runners, commented that they were "more of a family." However, because of their small size, they were forced to work harder than any other team in the league.

But, for the team, the most important thing was that through it all, they survived in great shape.

Youth Group

"Focus on the strength" were the words that were at the center of attention for the Varsity water polo team this year. With only five returning players, the team had to perfect five or six strategies rather than to spread out their ability.

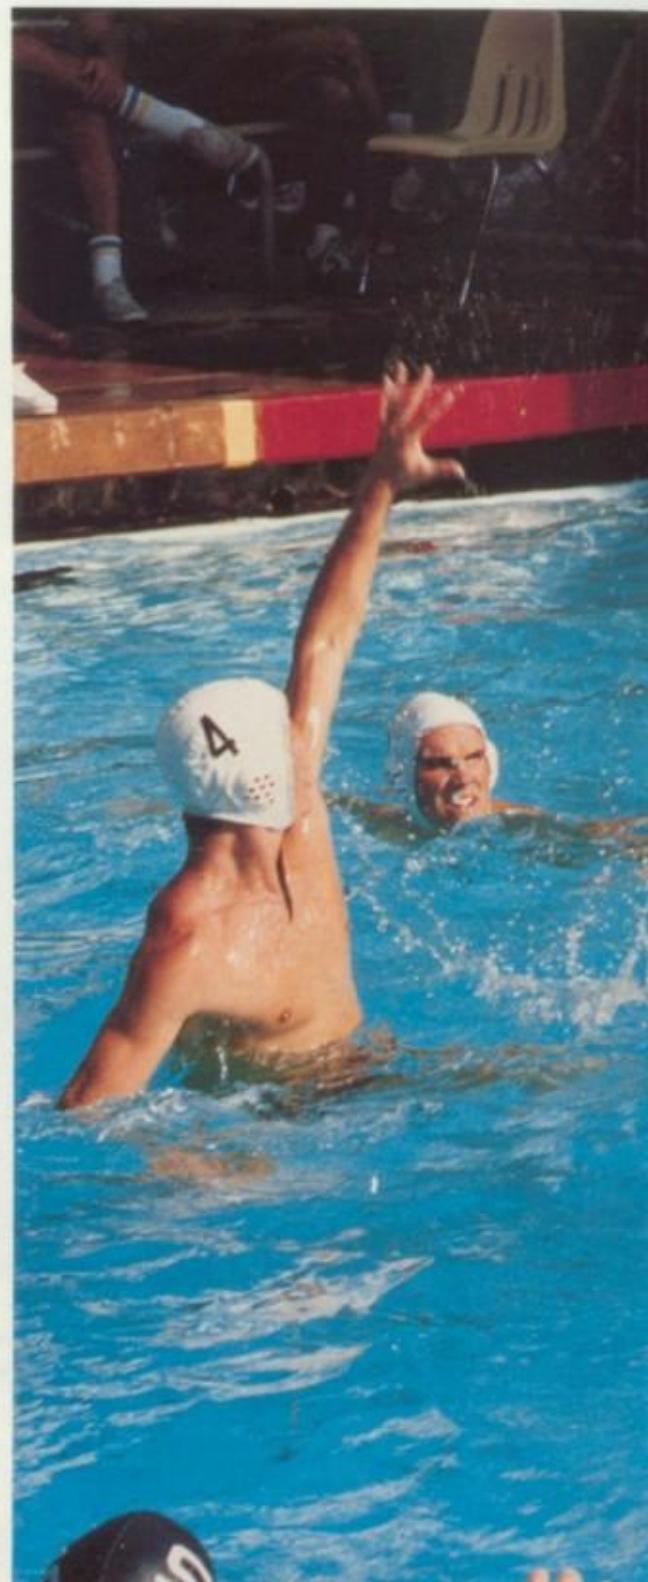

"Our goal was to put it all together during the games," commented Parker Steel, who was the team's co-captain along with Willi Swanson. The team members' greatest inspiration turned out to be each other.

"We practiced an hour before school, during sixth period, and also two hours after school," said Steve Fineberg. "And our biggest concern during training was the speed". But even for this enthusiastic group of juniors and seniors, slight traces of gloomy complaints remained. These complaints varied from "no pool heating" to "the lack of school spirit for the sport".

"We are in the roughest league in the nation, the Sea View League, and everyone in the team is dedicated to the sport, but we don't get hardly any recognition! I mean, how come we don't have any cheerleaders?" exclaimed Chris Strople, one of the more outspoken players.

Quickly avoiding the hand from behind, Ashly Brown attempts a shot at the goal.

A returning goalie, Mike Kim, successfully defends Estancia's turf from the Costa Mesa team.

Even though he is surrounded by an overwhelming number of Newport Harbor players, Mike McNeff remains perfectly composed.

Through Speed And Practice, They Learned And Achieved Team Work!

"Well, I suppose we did pretty well considering how inexperienced we are," observed Mike Joyner with optimistic hopes. This year, the J.V. water polo team was revived with Mike Joyner and Nathan Camp as its co-captains.

The group started the year off with an excitement created by the team's eagerness to learn. Special plays were learned from the new coach, Rich DeVore. Of course, these newly gained skills came in handy and paid back, according to the players.

An outside observer, Mike Milby, described the J.V. team with a single word, "potentials". Continuing his explanation, he said, "it's a young team, and, since they started working together already, they are going to be really good by the time they are in Varsity".

With plenty of enthusiasm, the team went into an intensive training.

The main goal was to balance their skills. Swimming distances for several hours a day helped them to increase their speed, and the practices with the balls allowed them greater capability to handle the balls.

However, through it all, stood their team work, and they encouraged each other through out the season. Looking at the team, one can clearly understand the meaning of the words, "team work".

Whether Or Not We Win Or Lose We Stay Together

The varsity tennis team did extremely well this past season. With a record of only 3 losses to Miraleste, Corona del Mar, and again to Corona del Mar, the coaches had high hopes for the varsity players and others and C.I.F.

Dina Birch, a player on the varsity team said one of the reasons for the team's good record was increased practice time. Kari Deutsch agreed, "We have a really good coach, and she's been working us hard all season, which is good because we have a tough league"

Whether or not the team did well, everyone worked hard and had a good time.

Gaining Experience And Skill, Not Only Strengthens The Body, But Wins Matches

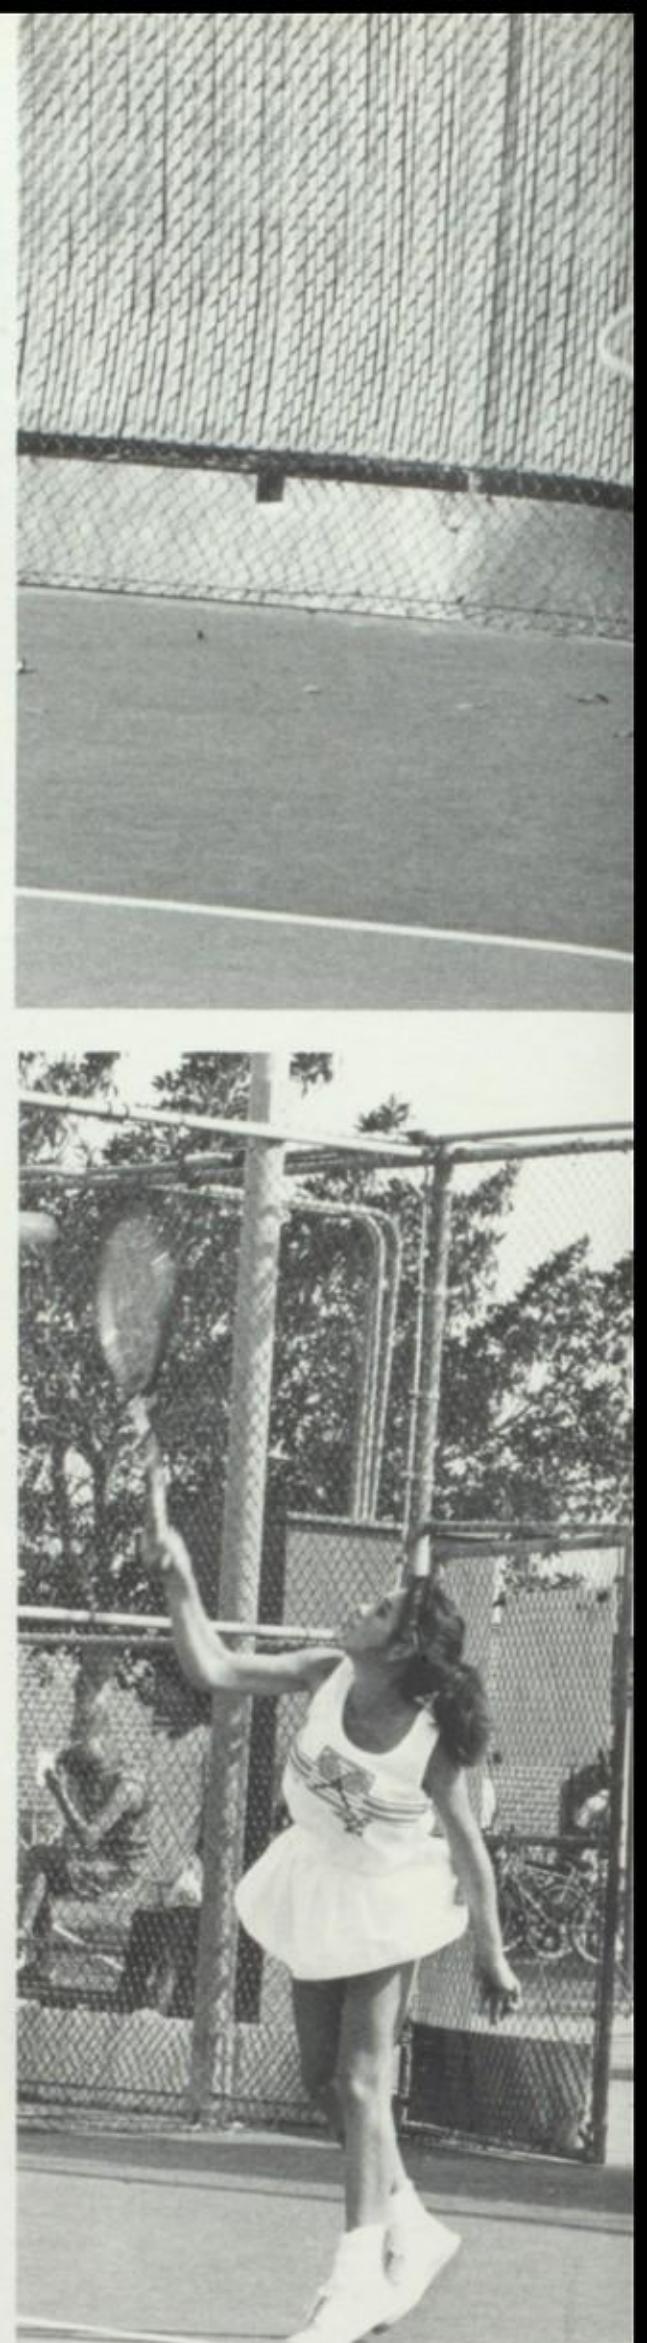

If you were a player on the Estancia tennis team, you were a very busy person.

The players had only two actual days on which to practice, Mondays and Wednesdays. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, the team had dual meets against other schools, when they had to play six game sets against three other people. On Fridays, they played their mandatory challenge matches against each other for their ranking on the team.

When some of the players weren't busy with team-related matches they played in other tournaments in the area. One of the most popular tournaments for players to go to was Ojai, where Estancia has done well in past years. These tournaments helped the players gain experience and skill and helped improve their game.

We Party Because We Lose Or We Party Because We Win

"We've improved a great deal, in fact, in the first four games we've scored more points than last year all together," said one of the team captains, Todd Brooks. "Everyone practices harder, we're sharper than we've been in a long time", said the other team captain, Dereck Coleman. Brooks continued, "With people such as Sterling Dilkey who controls the line or Ryan Van Aken who plays both offense and defense and who seems to lead the team in quarter back sacks, how can we go wrong?" The team also had some thoughts about the coaches. "He's hard nosed coach but he knows his stuff", said Dilkey about coach John Liebengood. "Coach Lieben-good came with a winning attitude, and he put in a whole new system. There were new practices and basically he got things going again. For example, the weight room he had made exclusively for the football teams," said Brooks. "Liebengood also started the team meal last year at the Newport Rib Company before the game. The team gets together to have an intense but delicious meal," said Coleman.

Summing up his feelings Brooks said, "The band has something to play about, the cheerleaders have something to cheer about, but most of all the crowd has something to brag about."

With Jeremy Twardowski, Sean Knudsen, Chris Yagerlener, Dave Rickard and Company as our cheerleaders, how can we lose!?

The offensive line gets a quick pep talk by Todd Brooks before they go smash their opponents!

True Heart Of The Sophomore Team.... Definitely Was Spirit

It's the fourth quarter and the clock says two minutes left in the game. The score is Home 14, Visitor 7. Can you imagine the pressure?

"You get really scared and you're wondering if there really is a God", said Mike Aulet, receiver. But Greg Brannis, quarter back, seemed to think "it's a breeze, you've done it over and over in practice." "The best part about winning, is, we're giving Estancia a good name and when we get up to Varsity, watch out; believe me, we've got victory already spelled out for us", said Jack Howard.

Every team has its traditions after winning a game. Estancia does too. Howard said, "When it's an away game and we've won, on the way home we honk the bus horn as many times as the points we scored, like when we beat Mesa, we honked it 42 times."

Yet, the main issue was pointed out by Brannis. "We've got a good coaching staff, team cooperation, plenty of discipline and a winning attitude."

Swimmers Striving for Success

Estancia High School had a dedicated varsity swimming team. Headed by team captains Mike Milby, who swam 100 yard butterfly, and Sarah Miller, whose stroke was freestyle, they set certain goals which included improving their time, their strokes, and winning. The team started working out every morning at 6:00 am during the season, and stayed after school for two to three hours.

Most of the team members agreed that there was a great deal more involved than just swimming. Milby said, "You get psyched up a lot before a meet. You feel bad if you don't win but it makes you feel better if you improve your time." According to Steve Fineberg, whose event was sprint freestyle, "Varsity's a big unit. There's a lot of teamwork."

Willie Swanson did distance freestyle. He said he was in the team "Because I like it. I'd like to improve my time and win but it's also for the good of the team."

The varsity swimming team learned what it takes to be a successful team. It takes hard work, dedication and discipline.

Enthusiastic Coaches And Dedicated Swimmers Made 3 Great Teams

Both JV and Frosh/Soph swim teams showed promising signs for the future. Those students that joined the team were hard working students who were there to win.

The Boys' Frosh/Soph team started off the season strong and looked to be undefeated with a record of 8-0. Unfortunately, the team lost a few of its strongest members, and the team was not able to win its last three meets.

The Frosh/Soph Girls' team consisted of mostly freshmen. Their season went smoothly, with no outstanding losses. The JV team faired the same.

All three teams agreed that their success was due to "great coaches that really cared", as Erin Driskell said.

Steve Heiberger said about Coach Cutler, "He gives a mean workour, but he's a good coach."

Jeff Korenberg was quick to say about Coach Carpenter, "I like the Coach giving us a chance. He has a great attitude."

"I would say that our teams did so well because we had enthusiastic coaches and dedicated swimmers," said Rob Carneado. "And if we all stay together for two more years, we'll be unstoppable!!"

Jumping And Running On The Right Track

The track team was determined to "reach personal goals and achievements," according to Stephanie Urrea. Their emphasis was more on personal records than team victories because there was a general feeling of a lack of varsity depth. "The biggest problem was trying to get more people out for the sport," said John Beth.

For those that joined the team, a typical workout consisted of warm-ups, then sprints and speed work for short distance runners, and a long run for those in long distance. After their workout, runners worked on their personal techniques. Sprinters practiced getting out of their starting blocks fast, relay members worked on passing the batons, and distance runners practiced pace and speed techniques.

Meanwhile, jumpers and hurdlers were trying to perfect their form and speed. Stephanie Urrea, a hurdler, described the hurdle group as "very close and high-spirited."

Other events in track included the pole vault, shot put, and discus. Pole-vaulter Scott Chesebro said, "My biggest achievement was to be the Beach Cities champion last year." His goal for the season was "to reach the state finals."

Whether they won, lost, or tied, our track members did their personal best.

Jeh Hildebrand makes his way to the finish of his first sprint of the season.

Cathy Coppi heads on, determined, in the middle of a long two mile race.

Taking the pole down with him, Sean Evans can't quite make the height in the high jump.

Jeana Weber puts all her power into throwing the Shot Put.

Stephanie San Jose and Melissa Stratton put all that's left of their strength into getting over that last hurdle.

Athletes Sporting Their Traditions

Each member of the track team had their own personal tradition or "secret" to achieving their personal goal.

Cindy Pearson, the school record holder in the 330 low hurdles said, "Every race, I just stare down my lane and picture the finish line around the curve and think that there's something I want at the end."

Jenny Weaver, a varsity member on medical leave, said about running, "Before the race, I try to relax and think about doing my own personal best."

Eloise Brown said that during the race she concentrates on passing each person one at a time. "I'm not running against a school," she explained, "I'm running against other individuals."

These techniques were designed for and by each individual athlete. The stamina and determination they displayed on the team was also a helping factor in their personal lives.

All Players Agreed: it is A Mental Game

To some, golf seemed an unimportant part of the many sports at Estancia. But it took tremendous skill and determination to become a good golfer. As Kumi Takahashi, a varsity team member, explained, "Golf's a lot harder than people think, you can't just go out there and hit the ball."

The golf team enjoyed a successful season due to their daily practice which lasted 3-4 hours. It was the chance to golf every day that was one of the main reasons some of the members joined the team. Although Austin Maki simply plays, "'Cause it's in my blood."

All of the golfers realized though, the difficulty of the sport and why those talents."

Chris Lowry said, "People think golf is something stupid, but once you've tried it, it's fun."

As the season went on, the players continued to improve, as they scored several victories against team after team. In the end though, it didn't matter whether or not they won, it was how they played the game.

Experience Leads To Victory

Catch Us Now

Varsity softball consisted mostly of seniors, whose talent and experience continuously showed throughout the season. Eagles' softball prided themselves on their ability to consistently play as a team.

"Since we got a new coach, our teams attitude towards softball has changed," said Melony Wojtkiewicz, referring to first year Coach Tammy Kane. Coach Kane, "Tammy," graduated in '86, and along with previous years of playing, she played varsity softball for four years here at Estancia. Having a great deal of softball experience, along with knowing many of the teams members, she was able to teach the team much about the sport.

During the season, the team worked hard and excelled in all areas. "We have a really strong defense, and a lot of determination," said Marie Midland, varsity's second baseman. It was this determination that helped the Eagles to have such a successful season.

Cheryl Ackers, another talented coach new to softball, led the junior varsity to a very good season. "She motivated us to play as a team, not as individuals," said Lisa Fuentes. She continued on to say, "She worked us hard, but it paid off in games." J.V. had an impressive year with their domination in the field, and their strength at the bat.

Dedication And Hard Work Make Them Valuable And Important

They Are Superstars

Is there any special definition to describe a superstar? Actually, there is. These are the dedicated participants of various sports who have been selected either by their coaches or their fellow team mates as the most valuable and important players for the season.

"It definitely takes good parental guidance!" explained Mark Hartley, the superstar for the football team. "They support me positively in everything I do."

There was a definite pride in being the "best" the players pushed themselves to the limit, knowing that a positive outlook on their performance would get them far.

"You need dedication, hard work, and responsibility", continued Mike Mc Neff, chuckling. "I think I worked on all that except for responsibility!"

Most players strongly valued the importance of their teammates and understood that they would not be "at the top" without their team.

Trying to escape the Laguna Hill's defense, Shawna Newbern shoots for the basket.

They Took The Field With Aggressiveness

"You can't put us under one name, because we adapt depending on the situation," stated Chris Jones, about the teams' versatility. The girls' soccer teams, with their aggressiveness and their love of the sport, took the field by storm.

The teams, during the pre-season, were favored to win league and CIF. Of course, a rigorous body conditioning followed their goal. The players learned the value of patience, hard work, and endurance. Unity became extremely important, and each player played for her team, rather than for the individual glory.

Michelle Strand commented with a hopeful smile, "We really want a banner for winning CIF in our gym."

Every player made some form of sacrifice for the team and loved every single moment of their victories.

"I cracked my ribs, and it took a while getting back into the team, but it was worth it!" exclaimed Alicia Miller.

Soccer was a powerful sport that never stopped moving, and for many players, like Jenny Daley, it was something she "grew up with."

For Basketball Players And Fans A Year Of Spirit.

"I play basketball, because of its intensity", said Angelica Sunoto.

For the girls' basketball teams, this year was the height of their team spirit.

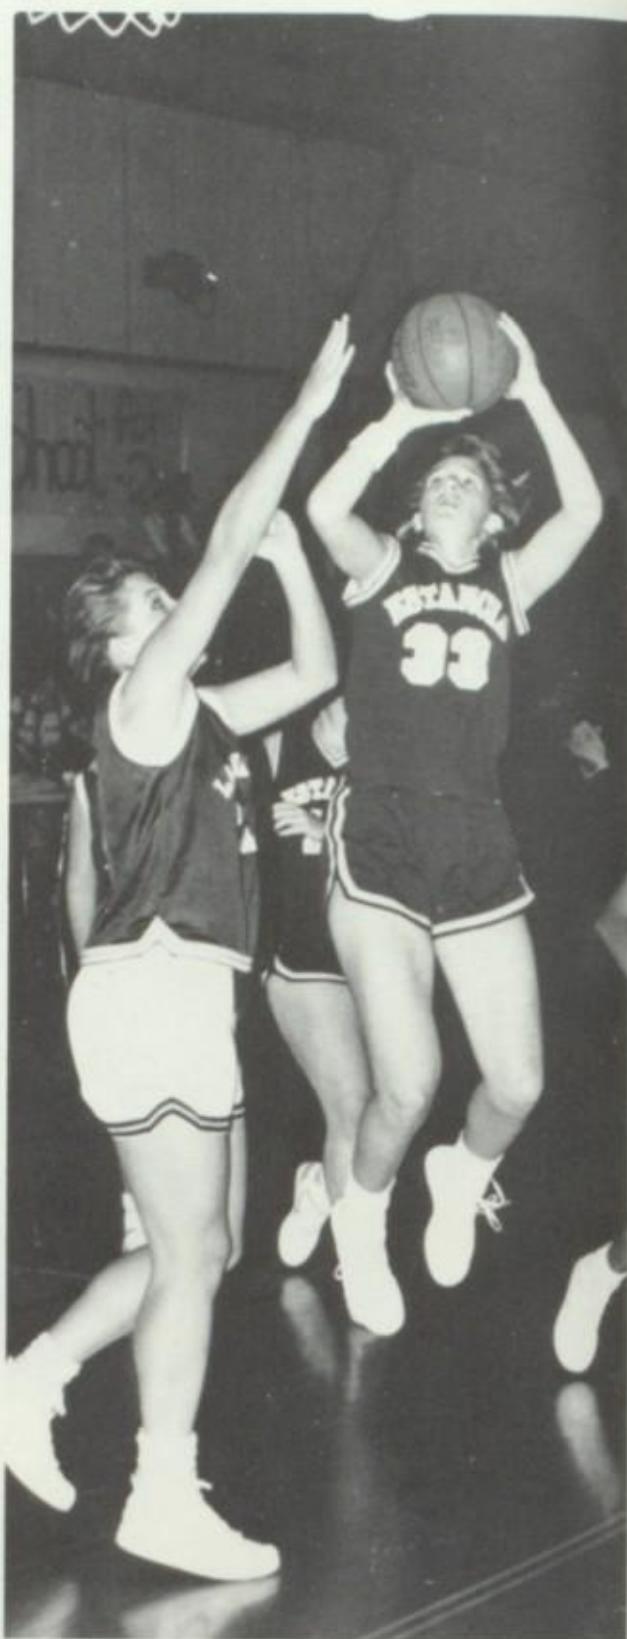

Because they had worked with each other for so long, each member understood another and gave one hundred percent support to each other.

The teams mainly focused on "the fundamentals" and the goal was to gain tolerance for themselves.

Of course, the fun was always there, and, according to Christy Schwarz, the team was, once, even charged with "an assault with deadly snowballs on their way home from the Beverly Hills Tournament".

Success

Good Coaching And Team Support Spell

He was described as an outstanding teacher, a miracle-worker, and God's gift to Estancia. He was the varsity boys' basketball coach Tim O'Brien and he was given most of the credit for the team's fortunate season.

"The coach is the team," said Mark Hartley, a varsity team member. "He works us hard and we run a lot, but it's paying off."

Even the younger teams were aware of O'Brien's abilities. J.V. player Karl Bui said about him,

"He's very decisive and in control of everything. He wants the best out of everybody - 110 percent."

Sophomore player Brian Forbath went on to say, "He makes a better team this year with less talent than last year."

Soccer Players Play With An Overwhelming Intensity

"We have a very strong defense, and we are improving everyday", evaluated Kevin Keith.

With their intensity and their eagerness to play and score a goal, the boys' soccer teams pulled together as one. Their determination was easily detectable in their training. Everyday, they engaged in at least fourty-five minutes of continuous circle drill and, the basic skills, too, became important. The main goal of this training was to build endurance, but, for many players, it meant "running around until you fall".

However, Sean Daley, the goalie, stated, "we are in best shape possible and play one hundred per cent! And believe it or not, circle drill actually helps!"

Apparently, all the hard work paid off, and, during the pre-season period, the Estancia soccer teams were ranked second in the Seaview League by the newspapers. For the team, that was in one of the toughest leagues in the nation, this was quite an accomplishment.

Soccer meant action and determination for the players, but for those enthusiastic spectators, it was the fast paced entertainment of the year!

All Emphasis Was On Their Enjoyment

For many players, a game of soccer turned out to be a chance to let out their frustrations and keep themselves "sane".

"I don't know what I would do if I can't play soccer. I would explode or something", stated Mark Kirsch, who had been playing this sport ever since he was five years old.

Behind the hard work, there was a chance to have fun and start a friendship. Believe it or not, the emphasis was on enjoying themselves, and, if that became impossible, playing became meaningless.

Most of the players realized that one person could not make up the team and that everyone had to play as one.

"The best parts are winning and playing with your friends", continued Sean Daley. "We love to score goals".

Soccer was a "constant sport", where the ball "never went out of plays", and, according to Chris Lawry, "you really have to run".

Carlos Garcia pushes himself to the limit during the last half of the game.

Before a game against Tustin, Miguel Millan warms up.

Avoiding the player from Saddleback, Fernando Millan shoots for the goal.

During an intense game, David Tyssee helps the goalie in protecting the goal.

Varsity, Tradition Of Winning!

You're on the mat and every muscle in your body is being worked. You're about to pin your opponent for the win. What's the feeling like? For a varsity player it's torture! As Brian Wallace put it, "It's an awesome feeling when you know you're going to win but if you make a mistake or let down your guard, anything could happen!"

Varsity players practiced at least five hours a day. Daily practices consisted of running (sprinting) with five second intervals of jump roping, running up and down bleachers and god ole' "Rusty." Rusty is a grueling sprint of going back and forth on lines! As Rod Corrido said, "It takes dedication with an outstanding Coach!"

When you've been League Champions for the past three years, to be a wrestler is to be proud! "It's not a free walk trying to be varsity. You've got to work for it to be the best!" said Ron Miller. "Winning is the best part," said Corrido. "It's an individual sport and if you win you know you've achieved the best!"

Doing the "Turk" Brian Wallace makes life very hard for his opponent.

Using his leg to get his opponent right where he wants him Luon Ton goes for the win!

Showing his strength and flexibility Jack Pacheco gives it his all!

Showing the concentration a wrestler needs Luon Ton gives us a good example.

Proud Wrestlers Concentrate On Making It To The Top

"Wrestling is like life," said Chris Barton. "If you can't take the heat get out of the kitchen!"

Our Frosh/Soph and J.V teams did very well this year. Winning almost all of their matches they knew they were good.

There was a special feeling to it all. "It's a one on one sport. The harder you work the better you do", said Jack Howard.

"But when you're wrestling a guy of the same strength, weight and knowledge, and you win it's an awesome feeling!" said Joey Web- ber.

If you think about it, wrestling is a legal way of fighting. You're in there for yourself. "The people that quit are the people that can't handle it! It's peer dedication," said Howard.

"But the goal set by most is to be Varsity," said Mark Arrons. "When you're Varsity, you know you've really made it to the top!"

Reaching for the gold Dan Petrone achieves it through his deadly moves!

Giving a good example of Twister Tuan Nguyen goes for it!

Carrying On Dreams And Hopes Of Winning!

It's game point and you're serving the ball. You can feel the pressure mount as you bring your hand back and hit the ball. The ball is a success! You're feeling more relaxed but now the ball comes to you and you know it's up to you to make that point.

What's it really like when you know it's up to you?

"It's a lot of pressure; you just have to do what feels good," said Mark Kirsch

Volleyball is a sport that can be played almost anywhere, "It's fun to play at the beach; you can get your frustrations out on the ball," said Kirsch. However, Todd Brooks believed that volleyball is "a team sport where everybody has to work together."

Kevin Keith believed that the "focal point of the team was our setter, Todd Brooks. He was our main attack and was doing very well!"

Brooks felt that, "Coach Pestolesi had a much better attitude, practices were more intense, we worked harder for a shorter time."

But the best way to sum up the season was as Keith put it, "we were real competitive, we had a lot of experience, we put it together and worked hard!"

Individuals United With Team Work.

"It's the greatest game ever invented!" exclaimed Lance Ely, while defining that well-known national pastime, baseball. "It was perfect the first time they made it! It is the only individual sport within a team sport".

No one could deny the difficulty of the sport. After all, "hitting a round ball with a round bar squarely" could not be considered easy by anyone. However, for most of the Estancia players, it was the enjoyment of each game that attracted them time and time again.

"I like it," continued Nevan Burica, matter-of-factly. "It's a fun game to play". For most of the players, baseball was no longer just a simple activity. It had become a part of their lives.

They Played As If They Were Hard As Nails

From six o'clock in the morning to six o'clock at night, they were here. All those mornings they had to get themselves out of bed ever so early, they reminded themselves to be proud that they were "the first people to be here and the last people to leave". The mission to be accomplished was to develop "a mental toughness".

"We mainly focused on pitching", stated Gabe Javage. "The best part is we are really united!"

They were one of the hardest working teams in years, and proved themselves to be worthy of their nickname, "the Nails". The players were terrific under pressure and knew what it meant to be aware of their surroundings.

With Practice They Were United With Energy

"The team has potential, but it's going to take a lot of hard work and dedication," said David Liu with a lot of enthusiasm. Liu is a senior on the boy's tennis team. He summed up the team as "energetic" and "united."

The team started their season against Mesa and after a long match the Eagles finally defeated Mesa.

Early in the season Mr. James Jenner said, "We have potential, but we're young. Hopefully we'll play 500 ball, and place third in league, making it to CIF."

Varsity player, Keith Brown said that the team's strongest asset was the double-team. Brown is also known as "Squeaky." The team came up with that name because he squeaks while serving.

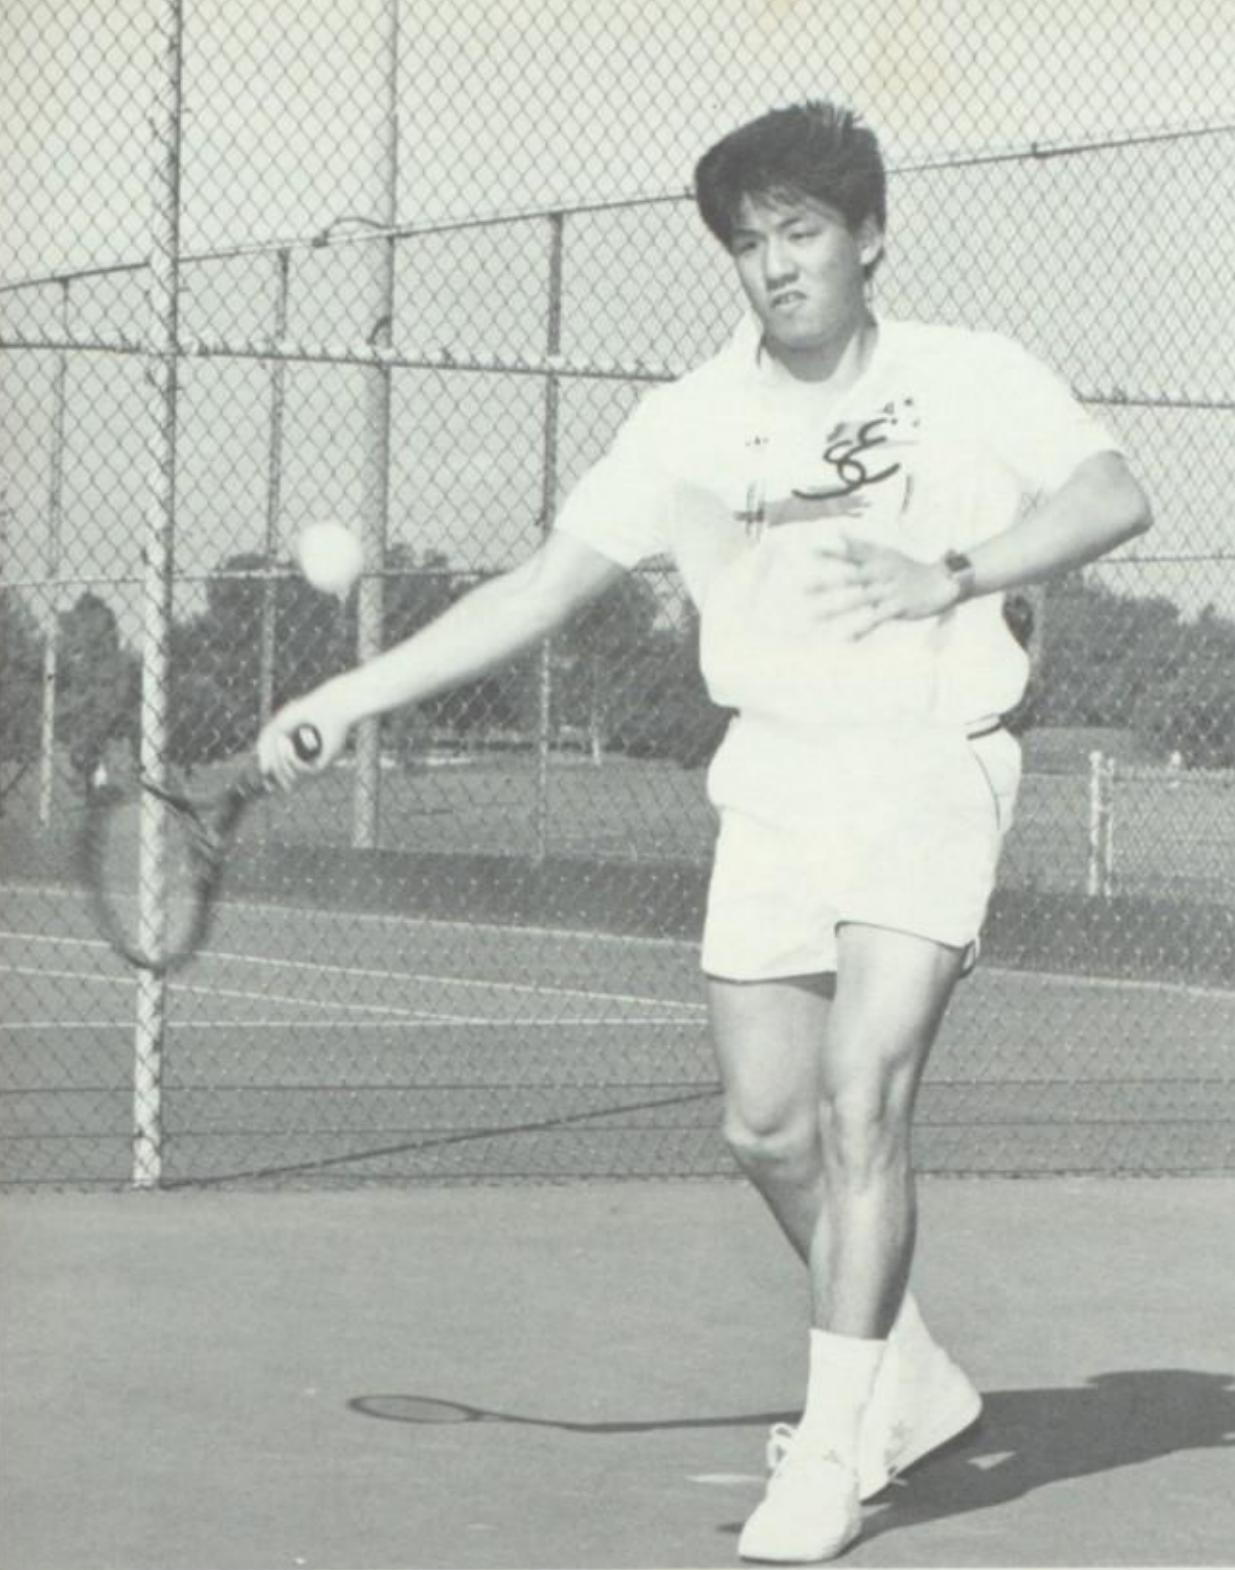

Although tennis required a lot of time after school practices, the accumulation of these hours sure paid off.

During an afternoon practice, John Tsai works on his backhand with J.V. teammate.

Mike Horansky fights back against a Harbor opponent.

While playing against players from Woodbridge, David Liu shows why Estrada has one of the best double's teams around.

Albert Huang watches the direction of his serve during practice.

Keith Brown successfully returns the ball, marking his first victory for the season.

A newcomer, Kevin Kern, returns the ball to his opponent from University.

They Are Learning To Be Number One

"We are 'building'!" exclaimed John Tsai, describing the boys' tennis team.

The team members were motivated by the fun of the sport and the excitement of winning each match. The consistency of each player increased day by day, and they experienced vast increase in their ability to manipulate the ball.

"Our coaches, like J.J., really help us with their eagerness to win", stated Joe Schlosser, who had been a part of the team since his freshman year. "We are playing our hardest, and it looks like we are going to accomplish a lot."

The team was strong, and they pushed themselves to the limit. The training included running sprints, working on their strokes, and improving their footwork.

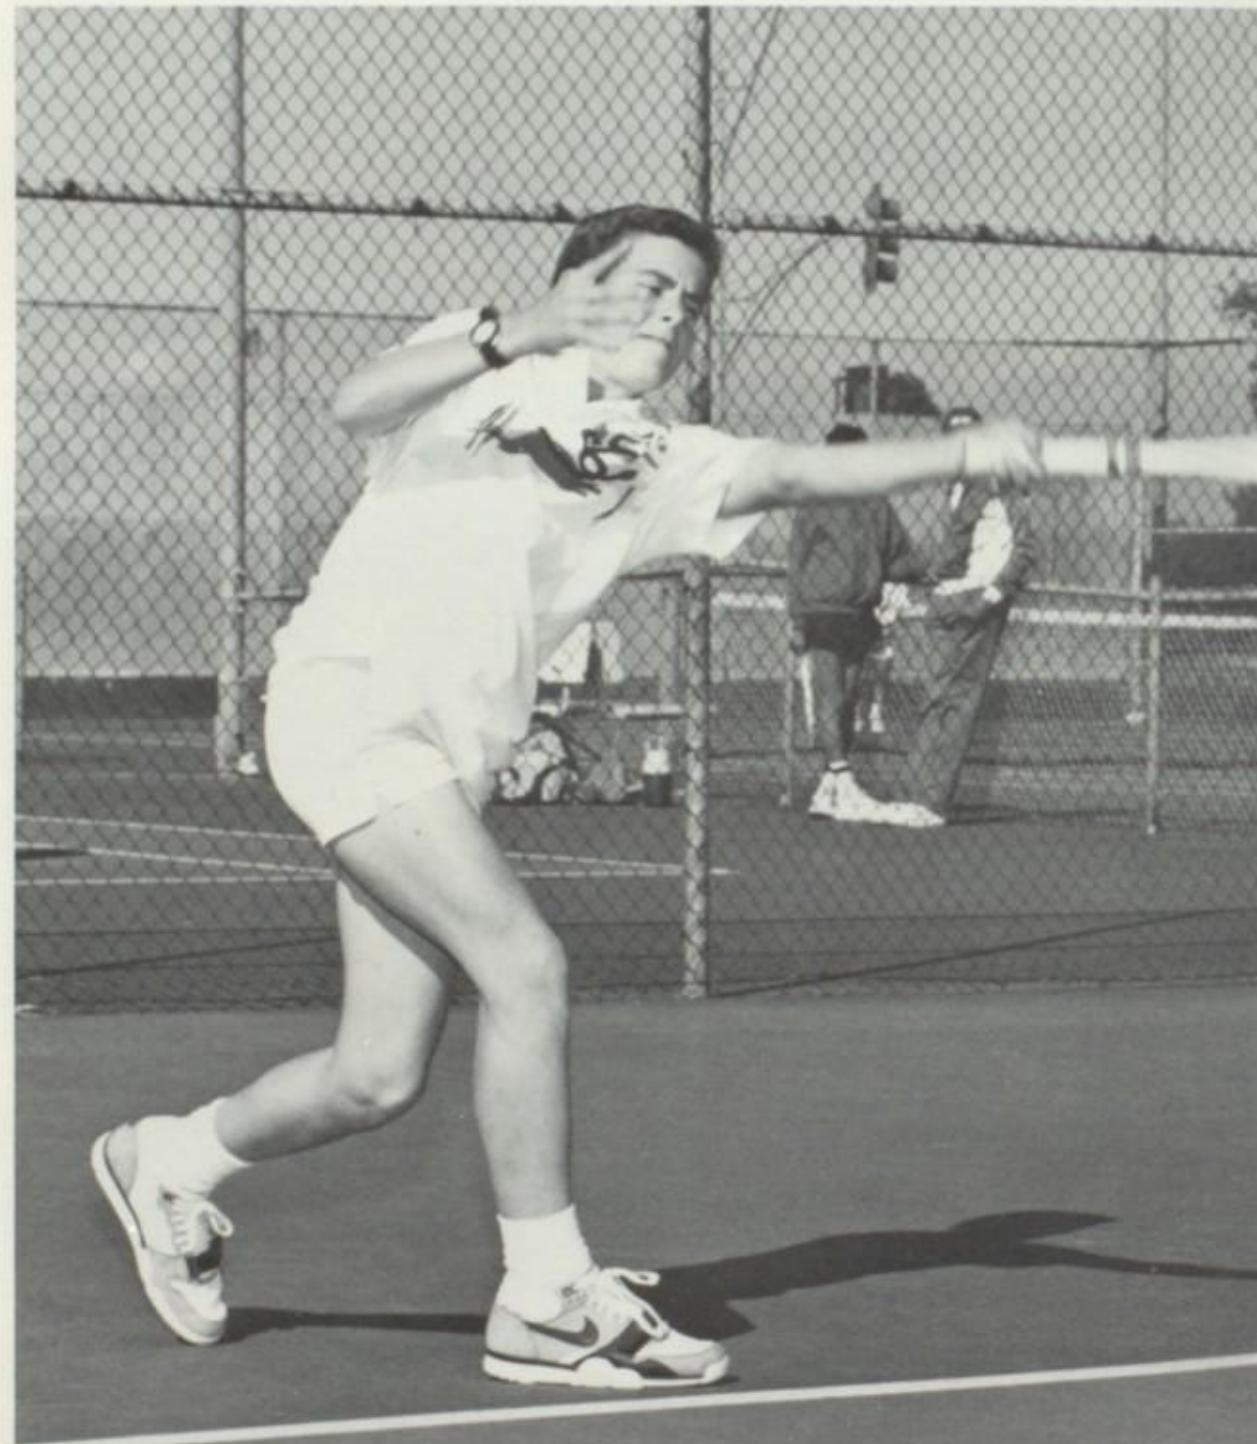

Everyone was different, and there really was no way to describe them all in one word. Applying everyone's talent, the meaning of the word, teamwork, became clear.

"The most important thing is learning to be a team," stated Tyler Mc Lean. "We are going to be number one".

John Petraskas entertains himself with a little practice before a match against Mater Dei.

Tim Lenord is taken by surprise by his opponent's sudden attack.

With a little help from his double's partner, Brett Moody easily crushes the competition.

In the "dojo", the instruction room for karate, David Walter practices his left basic stand preparing for a front strike. David already has his red belt.

Debbie Hargrove attempts a layback on the cliffs of Corona del mar beach.

In Ice Capades, Christine Luxembourger practices to become the best possible skater.

Students Striving for Perfection

Estancia High School had more than just a few students who participated in sports which weren't school related.

One student was Christine Luxembourger who's been competing in ice skating since she was 8 years old. She commented, "It's fun and free but it's also hard."

Jason Goddard and Joe Dunham have practiced fencing and broad-sword fighting for 3 years. Goddard said, "It's kind of different than any other sport."

Sailing was another exciting sport which some students enjoyed. They formed an outside school organization called Sea Scouts which is a part of Boys Scouts. Among those students were Matthew Khachadoorian and Brian Wallace. "I started sailing just as something to do and it turned into an excellent and exciting learning experience" said Khachadoorian.

Others students who participated in out of school sports were David Walter who has studied karate for the past 5 years and Heidi Chung whose sport has been gymnastics since kindergarten. Debbie Hargrove took a class in rock climbing and loved it ever since. Both Marie Midland and Katie Dickerson have enjoyed water skiing since they were children.

These were a few of the students who had enough courage to expand their horizons and reach for their dream.

Matt Khachadoorian relaxes after a long cruise to Catalina.

Jason Goddard and Joe Dunham practice their skills in fencing and broadsword fighting in their back yard.

Flash On Ads

This year three new fundraisers were added to yearbook; buddy pictures, 100 word Senior Sayings, and patrons. Buddy pictures showed two to five friends together. For Senior Sayings, fifty words were every Senior's privilege, and for extra money fifty extra words could be added. Patrons could put their name or their company's name in the book for a small fee. All fundraisers went very well, and helped to make the book better.

Rinada Polandra and Miriam Rothman are buddies in school, as well as out.

Walking through the halls, Mica Cain and Mike Aulet flash victory signs to show Eagle Superiority.

Friends To Remember

For many people, this year's new fundraiser was a hit. "I wanted a picture of me and all of my friends in the book, but I didn't think it was possible. Then Buddy Pictures were announced," said Terri Wagner.

"I always want to remember Jon (Courter), and I will if there's a picture of us in the yearbook," said Michelle Strand.

"It did a lot to help pay for the extra expenses of the book," said Jennifer Duffy.

People had fun taking their pictures and were looking forward to seeing them when the yearbook came out, while the staff was glad to get some financial aid and to please the student body at the same time.

Good-Bye

Every year welcomes a new set of freshmen and says good-bye to a worn-in set of seniors. The Freshmen have yet to learn to deal with the Seniors, and Seniors are just beginning to think of Freshmen pranks. By the end of the year, Freshmen have grown wise to the Seniors, and Seniors have gone on to "Senior Pranks", instead of picking on Freshmen. It's sad to see the year end, knowing that it's time to say good-bye to the Senior class.

Heather Horvat stops in mid-thought to answer her friend's question.

Neil King, Samantha Fuerbringer, Lisa Freeman, and Don Linton are in character, performing "The Dining Room" in the Forum.

Jenny Daley and Laurie Whistler are disgusted as their team's goalie misses the block.

In class with Casey Diggins and Jack Howard, Ms. Candelaria avoids the camera. Her goal was to remain unpictured in the yearbook.
